President's Budget Due For Trouble In Congress

Today's Message Believed Certain To Set Off Sharpest Funds Fight in Years

Tax Increase Opposed

By the United Press

President Truman is expected to touch off one of the sharpest budget disputes in recent years when he lays his fiscal 1951 Federal spending plans before an openly dubious Congress today.

While Mr. Truman has not revealed how much he wants to run the Government in the 12 months starting July 1, House Speaker Sam Rayburn said it will be "a little over 42 billion dollars." That would be about $1,800,000,000 under this year.

The President has made it clear in advance, however, that his spending program will entail a deficit again next year, even if Congress grants the "moderate" tax increase he will request in a special message later.

Tax Increases Opposed

He reportedly will urge reductions in some wartime excise taxes, coupled with bigger corporation and high-income bracket levies to make up the loss.

But Republican leaders, and some influential Democrats, already have come out flatly against tax increases in this, an election year. They will fight to balance the budget by what they call the "only practical" method—cutting Federal spending.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), of the House Appropriations Committee, is one of those who believe the Government must learn to live within its income, and his various subcommittees will begin work immediately after receiving the budget message.

Cannon wants to estimate the probable Federal income first and then tailor spending to fit.

It is the third and last of the regular presidential messages. In his State-of-the-Union and economic messages, Mr. Truman outlined his proposed programs and objectives. The budget will show how much they should cost.

Meantime, there are signs Congress is getting down to serious business in its announced effort to clean up its work by July 31

Taft Predicts Call for More Deficit Financing

NYHT News Service

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday predicted that President Truman will call on Congress to continue Federal deficit financing at the current rate of five billion dollars or more a year.

His forecast was made during a radio debate with Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.).

Taft said the President in his State of the Union message last week made it "inevitable" to conclude "that he is proposing a permanent plan for deficit spending, which I think is the most dangerous proposition we could have."

Douglas contended that, while he and "the Democratic Party as a whole" believed that "in a period of prosperity we should not only balance the budget but that we should have a surplus," the party "gives a goal for the American people of continued prosperity in the future, greater security for the individual and a more just distribution of income."

9 House Bills May Be Moved Via Discharge

Measures Blockaded Since Last Session Could See Action Soon

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Nine bills blocked since last session in the House Rules Committee, at least five of them indorsed by President Truman, are subject to "discharge" under the new Rayburn 21-day rule, a survey disclosed last night.

The Rules Committee blockade partially explains why the House has no business on tap for this week.

Held up by the rules group are not only the sharply controversial Fair Employment Practices Commission bill, but these other Administration measures:

The National Science Foundation bill.

The Alaska Statehood bill.

The Hawaii Statehood bill.

An important State Department bill increasing appropriations for United States participation in international organizations.

Also awaiting Rules Committee action, though not yet subject to "discharge," is the first phase of Mr. Truman's "Point IV" program—a bill guaranteeing private United States investments abroad.

Speaker Has "Out"

A scramble by competing committee chairmen to invoke the new rule to break through the jam and force their bills to a House vote is tentatively slated for Monday, January 23.

The rules gimmick is this: Where two or more chairmen rise to present "discharge" motion, the Speaker has complete discretion in which chairman he recognizes.

Speaker Rayburn thus would have an "out" on the FECP motion. Senate leaders have agreed to call up the Senate FEPC bill late this month or early next. Some House leaders argue that it

UAW Authorizes Strike At Chrysler on Pension

Detroit, Jan. 8 (AP).—Representatives of 80,000 Chrysler employes today authorized their national bargaining committee to set a strike deadline to reinforce pension demands on the auto firm.

Norman R. Matthews, director of the CIO United Auto Workers Chrysler division, said the date was left to the discretion of the committee.

The union and management have been negotiating since June on a pension plan. The union is demanding $100-a-month pensions from Chrysler.

Laundry Blaze Loss Expected To Top $10,000

A three-alarm fire yesterday swept through the Industrial Laundry, 1407 Lee hwy., Arlington, slightly injuring four firemen and causing property damage estimated at "at least $10,000."

The blaze swept the rear of the one-story stucco structure, badly damaged other portions of the building and destroyed large stocks of overalls, towels and cleaning rags which the company furnished gasoline stations and other industrial concerns on a rental basis.

Deputy Fire Chief T. E. Finisecy said damage to the building alone would amount to at least $10,000, but expressed the belief the structure may have to be condemned. He said a county building inspector would survey the damage today.

Finisecy said an accurate estimate of damage to stock would not be available until company officials have completed an inventory.

Three Arlington fire companies answered the first alarm at 10:55 a. m., but were unable to cope with the flames and dense, acrid smoke from burning rags. Second and third alarms went out simultaneously at 11 o'clock, bringing two more companies to the scene.

The fire was brought under control about an hour later, after three firemen had been overcome by smoke and another suffered a cut hand.

Finisecy said the cause of the

Ft. Belvoir Soldier Killed, 3 Others Hurt in Crash

A Fort Belvoir soldier was killed and his three companions injured, two seriously, when the car in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a tractor-trailer truck shortly before midnight on Route 1, just south of Washington.

Fort Belvoir authorities declined to identify the victim until his next of kin are notified. Names of his companions were not immediately available.

State police said both vehicles were northbound and about one mile from the 14th street bridge when the accident occurred. Driver of the truck, who was uninjured, was listed as Otis R. Major, 25, Fredericksburg, Va.

Anti-Crime Conference Here Lauded

4 National Groups Planning to Send Representatives

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Next month's crime conference here, aimed at how to tag the tygoons, yesterday drew praise from officials of the four organizations invited to attend by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

The conference, to begin February 16, will be a part of the annual gathering here of the United States attorneys and State and municipal officials from all over the Nation. Ways and means of dealing with the slot machine, numbers, horse race bookmaking and allied rackets will top the agenda.

Here is what the officials told The Washington Post:

1. American Municipal Association: From Chicago, Carl H. Chatters, executive director, said: "We certainly are enthusiastic about the idea of this conference for we've been promoting it so much for so long Racketeering today isn't any bogeyman set up to shoot at—it's the real thing. We have some ideas of what ought to be done and we'll have some definite concrete proposals."

Chatters said he will go to Denver this week to talk with Mayor Quigg Newton, AMA president, about selection of the group's five delegates to the crime conference in Washington. Chatters pointed out that AMA wrote McGrath last fall for Federal help in smashing the Nation-wide crime syndicates because "the matter is too big to be handled by local officials alone; the organized criminal element operates across State boundaries on a national scale."

At that time the municipal group called on McGrath to investigate "leaders of criminal syndicates" in respect to "local political contributions, evasion of income taxes, immigration and citizen status and any other activities." The letter described the modern crime king—the tygoon—as a "big shot" who cultivates "all the symbols of respectability," who wears "the clothes of im-

Night Shift Strikes at W. Va. Mine

Consolidation Coal Pits in Pittsburgh Area Expected to Be Shut Down Today

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 8 (AP)—A night shift failed to report to the Consolidation Coal Company's Rivesville mine near Fairmont as scheduled at 11 p. m. today.

An official of the mine said he understood the United Mine Workers local union had voted earlier in the day to strike. He said a sign, "No Contract, No Work" was posted by union men at the mine. He had no information how long the strike was to continue.

At Pittsburgh, a reliable source said UMW members would not report for work Monday at Consolidation Mines in the Pittsburgh area.

Pittsburgh Consolidation, the world's largest commercial coal company, employs approximately 4000 men in western Pennsylvania and 8000 in West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky.

The source indicated the men would be idle Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday — the workdays permitted by the UMW under the three-day work week. He said they probably would go back next week.

The Rivesville closure marked the third time in the mine's 30-year history it had been closed by strike. Its output of 2200 tons of coal a day is furnished exclusively to the Monongahela Power Company, and the mine has regularly operated with union permission during all strikes called by the UMW.

Seventy-five men were due to report tonight, of a total of about 225 employed at the mine.

16,000 Illinois Men To Return, Chief Says

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 8 (AP).—The Illinois chief of the United Mine Workers tonight said the 16,000 miners who walked off their jobs in 48 mines in Illinois last Tuesday will return to work Monday.

Hugh White, Illinois president, said he had issued an order last Tuesday for the men to return to the pits Monday. He said they would work on a three-day-week basis.

Sen. Robertson to Seek Antitrust Curb on Union

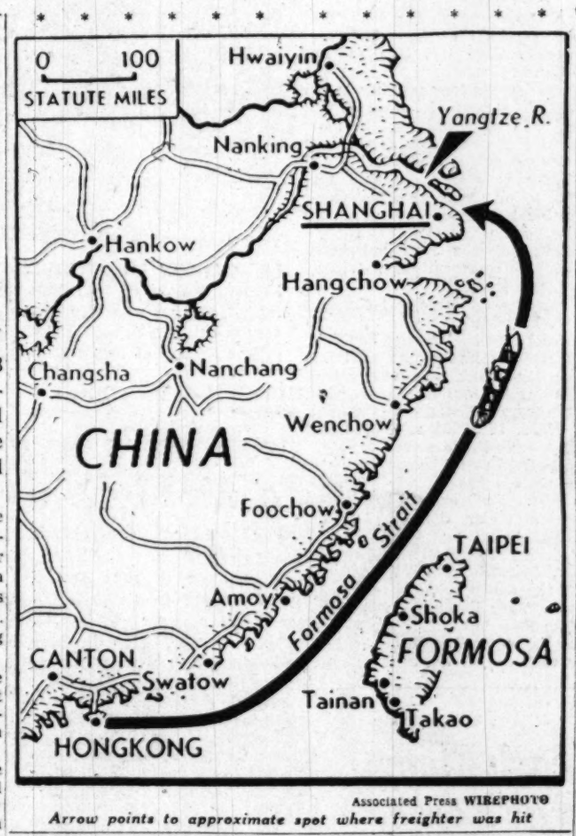

Sharply criticizing John L. Lewis for limiting coal production, Senator Robertson (D., Va.) last night announced he would urge Congress make labor unions subjected to the antitrust laws in certain cases.

Robertson said he planned to lay the recommendation before the Senate Banking Committee Tuesday when he reports on a coal industry investigation he conducted for the committee last summer.

The Virginia Senator noted that representatives of retail coal dealers from a number of Midwestern States are coming here today to discuss what can be done to restore full production of coal. Under instructions from Lewis, chief of the United Mine Workers, the pits now are being worked only three days a week.

The retail dealers, Robertson said, are "seeking relief from a

Attempt to Revise Chinese-British Treaties Expected

Hongkong, Jan. 8 (AP).— Chinese Communist silence on Britain's recognition of the Red regime led some observers in this British colony to wonder today if the Reds might seek to do some bargaining before "accepting."

The speculation was that the Communists might try to revise existing (Chinese Nationalist) treaties and agreements with Britain in such a way as to widen a breach between Britain and the United States on this sensitive subject.

(To Britain, the most important "existing agreement" concerns Hongkong itself. China ceded the island of Hongkong to Britain outright in 1841 and the adjacent Kowloon peninsula in 1860, but an

Soldier and Date Held Up, Robbed By Two Gunmen

A soldier and his movie "date" were robbed at the point of a gun last night by two youths while a passerby only glanced casually at what was going on.

Corpl. Robert Kennedy, 29, of Bolling Air Force Base told police he and his companion, Mrs. Dorothy H. Proctor, 35, of 1610 Trinidad ave. ne., were returning from a movie at about 9 p. m. when accosted at Queen st. and Trinidad ave.

One youth pushed a gun in his back, Kennedy said, and demanded his money. He gave the man $4. The other youth forced Mrs. Proctor against a fence and rifled her purse, but overlooked $12 she carried in a wallet.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Mme. Chiang Kai-shek today promised unremitting guerilla warfare and propaganda—and eventually a general uprising—against the Chinese Communist regime.

In a radio speech before leaving for the island of Formosa this week to join her husband, the wife of the Chinese Nationalist leader promised he would wage a last-ditch battle from the island.

In addition, she said, "Everywhere in China's mainland our guerillas will keep the torch of liberty."

She added:

"The enemy's lies and deceit, their treachery and propaganda, will be defeated not only with bullets but also with truth.

"The oppressed people on the mainland will be prepared so that at a given signal they will rise up simultaneously and overthrow the yoke of Communist domination with our returning armies."

Although she referred to the Chinese Nationalists as "abandoned and alone," Mme. Chiang told the American people:

The demonstrators were addressed by Lester Hutchinson, Labor member of Parliament, who demanded that United States troops be withdrawn from Britain, that Britain repudiate all military alliances and establish full trade relations with Russia and eastern Europe.

Flying Arrow Is Fired On 38 Times, Set on Fire

Freighter Outside Territorial Waters At Time of Attack, Headed for Shanghai

Aboard Flying Arrow (Monday), Jan. 9 (AP). — Chinese Nationalist warships shelled this blockade-running American freighter today in international waters off Communist China. There were no casualties.

One shell started a fire on the Flying Arrow's afterdeck. Another set a blaze in the No. 5 hold. Ten shells perforated the steering room. At least 38 shells were fired before the first direct hit.

The attack began shortly after this 6214-ton Isbrandtsen Line ship arrived in international water two miles off the mouth of the Yangtze River.

Aid From British Sloop

The ship is running the Chinese Nationalist blockade of Red China ports in defiance of warnings by the United States State Department. The Nationalists asserted the Yangtze mouth had been mined.

The Flying Arrow is the fourth Isbrandtsen ship shelled by the Nationalists while running the blockade of Shanghai. The Flying Trader was fired on October 15 but not hit. The Flying Cloud was shelled November 15 and the Sir John Franklin November 28. Both were hit but suffered no casualties. Several other ships of the line have been stopped by the Nationalists and released.

(At Hongkong, it was announced today that Isbrandtsen's Brooklyn Heights will sail from there for Shanghai Wednesday.)

British Sloop Aids Stricken Ship

The British sloop Black Swan came to the aid of the Flying Arrow after Capt. David Jones of Chicago sent this radio call to all American and British warships in the area: "Fire on afterdeck by Chinese warship."

The Black Swan, herself shelled by Chinese Communist shore batteries in the Yangtze last spring, quickly pulled up within 50 yards of this ship. Her captain said through a megaphone:

"I cannot take part in this war but if you cannot extinguish the fire with your own resources, we will board and help."

Shortly afterward, British sailors swarmed over the Flying Arrow's

District Facing Solid Blast of Overcoat Weather

Topcoat weather in Washington, which blew in Saturday, was due to be succeeded by overcoat weather early today, according to the Weather Bureau's forecast, low of 25 degrees in the city and 18 in the suburbs.

High yesterday was 39, at 3:50 p. m.

However, the forecaster says it will warm up a bit, later today. "Mostly sunny, milder in the afternoon, high in the middle forties," was his prediction. There will be increasing cloudiness tonight, with Tuesday mostly cloudy and milder.

Washington last night and early today was directly under a ridge of high pressure extending almost straight northward and southward. This, with clear skies, carries cold.

In the Middle West, authorities estimated that half of the 4000 persons who were forced by floods to flee their lowland homes had returned to them as sharp decreases in temperatures stopped thawing and ended rains. But in some areas, flood crests were continuing down streams to menace lower communities. Most of the flood damage was in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Tennessee.

Flood Water in House Used to Put Out Fire

Chillicothe, Ohio, Jan. 8 (AP).—Willard Ott didn't have to call the fire department today when his house caught fire.

His neighbors at nearby Yellowbud just helped him scoop up water from the floor and dash it on the burning walls.

His home was one of more than a score flooded when the Scioto River went over its banks. He and others were in the process of moving when the fire struck.

'No Reason for Change'

FBI Wiretapping to Continue, McGrath Says After Review

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said last night he has "fully reviewed" the wiretapping activities of the FBI and sees "no reason at the present time for any change" in the agency's policy.

His statement apparently was prompted by recent public criticism of the FBI and other branches of the Justice Department of their acknowledged practice of secretly tapping telephone wires to track down subversives and criminals.

James Lawrence Fly, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, sharply attacked the practice in a letter to The Washington Post last week. He asserted that the Justice Department is flouting the laws it is supposed to enforce by indulging in wiretapping.

Fly said the practice is clearly contrary to the intent of the Federal Communications Act, and a grave "threat" to American civil liberties. He demanded a congressional investigation.

FBI wiretappings also has been a hot legal issue in the New York Federal Court where preliminary proceedings are being held in the trial of Judith Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev on espionage charges.

FBI agents have acknowledged wiretapping was used extensively in the investigation of the Coplon-Gubitchev case, but denied that any information gained thereby was used as evidence for the prosecution.

McGrath said the Justice Department and FBI policies condoning "limited" use of wiretapping were laid down by the late President Roosevelt, and former Attorney Generals Robert H. Jackson, Tom C. Clark (both now Supreme Court justices) and Francis Biddle.

"In view of the emergency which still prevails and the necessity of protecting the national security," McGrath said, "I can see no reason at the present time for any change."

He did not elaborate on the reference to an "emergency" but it was presumed he meant the cold war. Also, the "national emergency" of World War II has never been legally proclaimed over.

McGrath recalled that Mr. Roosevelt approved wiretapping "when necessary in situations involving national defense" in a memorandum sent to the Justice Department May 21, 1940.

Again, in 1941, he said, Mr. Roosevelt defended wiretapping and said:

'I do not believe it should be

Speculation Has It Feb. 23

Attlee's Sunday Call on King Spurs Talk of Early Election

London (Monday), Jan. 9 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee made a rare Sunday visit to King George VI yesterday, strengthening the belief of many that Attlee soon will call for a general parlimentary election.

Speculation has been strong that Attlee, as head of Britain's governing Labor Party, will announce this week that a general election will be held February 23.

Sir Richard Acland, a Laborite member of Parliament, yesterday joined the group predicting that date. Replying to a question at a political rally in Buxton, England, Acland said: "Do you want a government to plan social justice at a time of difficulty or don't you? That is the kind of thing you have to decide on February 23."

Conservative Party leaders also have been alerted for a February 23 election because of reports pub-Laborites have reserved many public auditoriums for the previous night.

The present Labor Government was elected for five years in 1946. It has until July of this year to issue the call for national balloting.

The Prime Minister motored from his official home at Chequers to Sandringham in Norfolk, where the royal family traditionally spends the year-end holidays. The visit presumably was made at Attlee's own request. After his audience with the King, the Prime Minister was invited to lunch with the King and Queen.

Under a constitutional practice, the first act of any Prime Minister

Japanese Treaty to Be Topic At Commonwealth Parley

Colombo, Ceylon, Jan. 8 (NYHT). The peace treaty with Japan will "of course" be discussed at the forthcoming conference of foreign ministers of the British Commonwealth of Nations which begins here Monday, Philip Noel-Baker, secretary of State for commonwealth relations, said today.

Speaking at an informal press conference, Noel-Baker said that although no draft treaty would be prepared it was hoped the foreign ministers would agree on broad principles which might be incorporated in an eventual Allied Treaty with Japan.

The basic question facing the conference Noel-Baker said, is: "How far are we going to create the conditions under which the nations of the world will not want to turn to Communism?"

This question, he said, would involve the foreign ministers in a thorough discussion of methods through which Commonwealth members might help to raise economic levels in "backward" nations both through their own efforts and through existing United Nations organizations.

While the United Kingdom would not, of course, object to any unilateral help given to Asia by America, Noel-Baker said, the United Kingdom might itself prefer to work out some kind of Commonwealth "point four" aid or to evolve methods through which the United Nations could be strengthened.

Hearings This Week On Veterans' Bonus

By Rep. Byrnes

Bill Will Seek List of All House Votes

By the United Press

John W. Byrnes, (R., Wis.) yesterday said he would introduce a bill today that would solve an old problem for researchers by requiring publication of the voting record of every House member.

He said the measure is aimed at making more readily available "voting information which can only be obtained now by exhaustive searches through thousands of pages of the (Congressional) Record."

Most votes taken in both Houses of Congress are not recorded. Members merely sing out their "yeas" or "nays," or the presiding officer counts noses in some like manner.

There has been some agitation in the past for the installation of electrical voting devices that would automatically tabulate the votes. But these movements always have shattered on a stone wall of indifference or hostility.

Byrnes, who has published his own tally on every issue, said "there is no good reason why we should continue to make it difficult for our constituents to determine our individual voting record on every issue on which votes are recorded."

By The Associated Press

Bonuses for veterans of World War II may become a hot issue at this session of Congress, some members of the House Veterans Affair Committee said yesterday.

The committee this week will hear spokesmen for veterans organizations outline their programs for 1950.

Chairman Rankin (D., Miss.) would risk no prediction on the fate of bonus bills.

Rankin has introduced one of the two major bonus bills now in a committee pigeonhole. The other carries the name of Representative Pace (D., Ga.) as its author.

One committee member who wouldn't permit his name to be used said he would "not be surprised if a bonus bill comes out of our committee this year."

There is strong pressure for such action, he said, from Congressional groups who want to curb foreign spending and who believe veterans have not been adequately compensated for their economic losses.

This is a Congressional election year, he added.

The bonus bill bearing Rankin's name would give veterans $3 for each day of domestic service and $4 a day for foreign service, with a minimum of $100 and a maximum of $4500, in addition to $500 for any bonfide battle wound.

Deducted would be any amounts the veteran has already received in educational or unemployment benefits under the GI Bill of Rights.

The bonus would be paid in 10-year, interest-bearing bonds unless the amount due is less than $1300. Then it would be in cash.

The Pace bill would pay $5 for each day of foreign service and $4 for each day of domestic service.

Nine Bills May Reach Floor Via Rules Discharge Route

would be futile for the House to act until the Senate has shown it can break through the scheduled Southern filibuster.

Under the House rules reform adopted last session, chairmen whose bills are tied up in the rules group for more than 21 legislative days can move to "discharge" the committee on the second and fourth Mondays of each month.

Thus technically the rule could be invoked for the first time on Monday. Leaders generally have agreed, however, to transact no business in the House this week, and the showdown is shaping up for the 23d.

House Democratic whip Percy Priest (Tenn.) said yesterday he is considering asking a "discharge" priority for his National Science Foundation bill, one of the 24 legislative points in the President's State of the Union message. The House Interstate Commerce Committee will meet Tuesday to decide whether to move for action on this one on the 23d.

Chairman J. Hardin Peterson, (D., Fla.) of the House Public Lands Committee, who has five committee bills blockaded in the rules group, said he plans to ask for discharge of "one or more of them" on the 23d.

Peterson said he probably will press for action on the Alaska Statehood bill, the Hawaii Statehood bill and a bill liberalizing homestead opportunities in Alaska, in that order.

Peterson's committee has two other reported bills blocked by the Rules Committee and subject to discharge—legislation providing for a resident commissioner for the Virgin Islands and a mine incentive bill, now undergoing revision.

The State Department bill increasing the United States' share of participation in U. N.-affiliated organizations, was called up in the House last session, under a motion to discharge the Rules Committee, but a point of no quorum prevented its passage at that time.

Members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee argued that the bill nonetheless has priority over measures on the next House discharge day.

The ninth bill blocked by the Rules Committee for more than 21 days, and subject to action under the discharge rule, is a House Veterans Committee bill directing construction of VA hospital facilities to provide 16,000 additional beds.

President's Budget Due To Stir Fight in Congress and go home for the Congressional election campaigns.

Dairy State Senators seeking to block the Federal oleo tax repealer said they favor completing action by Friday. First, however, they will try to kill the bill by linking it with excise tax repeal.

Several committees also plan early hearings on the President's legislative proposals. The House Labor Committee will meet February 6 to try to end the deadlock on the Federal Aid to Education Bill.

And Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), has opened a drive to force Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee to bring up his liberalized Displaced Persons Bill.

Both measures are high on the President's list of "must" legislation.

Economy leaders face an admittedly difficult chore in trying to balance the budget. Much of the Government's outlay goes for fixed charges such as interest on the national debt, veterans benefits and other permanent programs set up by previous Congresses.

Military and foreign aid spending are the two areas where savings could be made most easily. But Administration sources claim the budget is "tight" in those fields and that further major reductions might endanger the success of the cold war against communism.

Rayburn said defense and foreign aid spending have been cut about $3 million below the current fiscal year. But part of this savings, he said, has been offset by new domestic spending proposals.

Republican leaders will concentrate their fire on the President's social programs which, they charge, are leading the Nation down the road to a "welfare state."

Business Loan Easing Backed By Sparkman

By The Associated Press

Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) yesterday joined president Truman in urging that Congress authorize longer time for repaying Government loans to business.

Sparkman said the present 10-year repayment limit on Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans should be extended in any worthy case where failure to do so would force a company to shut down.

But Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) said a decision ought to be deferred until Congress can review RFC lending policies. Fulbright has been critical of recent RFC loans to the Kaiser-Frazer automobile company and some other firms.

Both Sparkman and Fulbright are members of the Senate Banking Committee, which handles RFC legislation.

In his economic report to Congress last Friday, Mr. Truman urged that the RFC be authorized to lengthen substantially the repayment period on loans, especially to small companies.

side and aided in fighting the flames.

There were no American warships in sight.

(In New York, H. J. Isbrandsten, president of the line, immediately called for American naval protection of the Flying Arrow. He called the attack "entirely unlawful according to internatonal laws."

("According to standing naval regulations, the U. S. Navy should protect American vessels on the high seas and I hope it will be done in this case," Isbrandtsen said. He has called repeatedly for U. S. Naval protection. It was refused after the other incidents involving his ships.

(In Washington, the State Department declined immediate comment. It has received no direct report of the Flying Arrow's shelling, a spokesman said.)

The United States and Britain do not recognize the Nationalist blockade. However, the United States has warned American ships they run the blockade at their own risk.

Carrying $10,000,000 Cargo

The Flying Arrow left Hongkong early with a 10 million dollar cargo of high grade general merchandise, caustic soda, industrial chemicals, petroleum in drums and bales of cotton.

Preparing for possible attack, Captain Jones barricaded sections of the midship house with 250 bales of cotton—adequate to stop shells from three-inch guns, officers said.

The Flying Arrow also expected the possibility of mines in the Yangtze mouth. Chinese Nationalists had warned that mines had been laid there.

(The day the ship sailed from Hongkong, the Nationalist navy commander in chief announced from Formosa that the minelaying job had been completed. However, a mine scare that stopped shipping in and out of Shanghai in the early days of the Red occupation had proved groundless.)

Trailed by Destroyers

Yesterday, two Nationalist destroyer-escorts began trailing the Flying Arrow. Presumably they are the ones which fired on her today.

Chief Engineer Martin L. Gross of Clearfield, Pa., announced after the attack:

"I have 10 big holes in my steering room but they missed my steering gear."

Gross is a veteran of one torpedoing—off the northern Russian coast during the war. Other members of the crew also had war service under fire.

Eleven members signed off the ship before she left Hongkong. The State Department advised crewmen who did not wish to make the hazardous trip to Shanghai that they could leave the vessel. They were replaced by British and other foreign sailors.

Defied U. S. Warning

Twenty-nine of the ship's 43-man crew earlier had petitioned the State Department to provide naval protection for the Flying Arrow. In addition to the crew, the Flying Arrow carries 12 passengers, seven of them women.

The Flying Arrow sailed despite a State Department warning that its master might lose his license.

To this Jones had retorted:

"I am working for Hans Isbrandtsen in New York and if he says that I am to take the Flying Arrow into Shanghai, then I will take the Flying Arrow into Shanghai."

The Isbrandtsen Line is the only American company which has sent its ships through the Nationalist blockade.

Cominform Paper Brands Jap Red 'Antisocialist'

Bucharest, Jan. 8. (AP).—The Cominform Journal today accused Sanzo Nosaka, leading Japanese Communist, of "antidemocratic and antisocialist" views and declared his policies were serving the "imperialist occupiers of Japan."

It charged Nosaka with wishing to "naturalize" Marx-Leninism to local Japanese conditions.

The Cominform charges were based on Nosaka's contention—which is now a part of the Japanese Communist Party platform—that a "people's democratic regime" could be established under the American occupation.

Darden Doubts India Will 'Fall' For Communism

Richmond, Va., Jan. 8. (AP).—Indians don't thing communism will take over their country, Colgate W. Darden, jr., president of the University of Virginia, reported yesterday.

Home from a round-the-world tour, the Virginia educator said India's religious and family life are not susceptible to the lure of communism.

Darden attended a conference of educators in India and Parkistan. He found India is lacking in trained technicians.

He said the devaluation of currency hinders any plans of exchanging students between the University of Virginia and the University of Delhi.

Uprising Will Overthrow Reds In China, Mme. Chiang Says

us will always be cherished for its friendship and kindliness."

But she charged that Britain's recognation of Communist China was the action of a "moral weakling."

"Britain has bartered the soul of a nation for a few pieces of silver," she said.

"I say 'for shame' to Britain. One day these pieces of silver will bear interest in British blood, sweat and tears on the battleground of freedom."

"Russia," she said, "will never know one day of peace in China. Russia will never own China. China wil remain free."

She said China stands "with empty but willing hands," but did not renew the formal plea for help that brought her to America on a special mission 13 months ago—a mission almost entirely unsuccessful.

"I can ask the American people for nothing more," she explained.

"At such a time no pleading can be with dignity. It is either in your hearts to love us, or your hearts have been turned from us. It is either in your mind and will to aid China in her struggle for liberty, or you have abandoned liberty."

"But with or without help we shall fight. We are not defeated. Millions of my countrymen are yet dedicated to the lorg fight. As long as breath remains in us, and with faith in the Almighty, we shall continue the struggle. Not a day, not an hour will pass which will not be devoted to our struggle for freedom."

Mme. Chiang said Nationalist China is now fighting a battle for the world in the cause of liberty.

"The world is now divided between liberty and communism," she said. "In a day not too far distant millions of others will have to make the choice of fighting for their liberty or surrendering to enslavement.

"Let no one be deceived. Ours is the cause of freedom. It is not —and the world should know it is not—our struggle alone. China's struggle now is the initial phase of a gigantic conflict between good and evil . . . between liberty and communism."

G-Girl Tells of Arrest in Communist China

Miss Mary E. Braden is a pert and pretty Government girl from the small town of Dysart, Iowa. (population about 1000), who went to the big city of Mukden, China (population about one million), for the State Department.

There, along with Consul General Angus War and 12 other American citizens, she underwent 13 dreary, degrading months of "house arrest" only to be deported as a spy against Communist China.

Here to visit members of her family and report to the State Department, Miss Braden said yesterday the spying charges were something of a laughing matter—"we were so glad to be deported."

Months of Questioning

Ward and four of his staff were imprisoned, then tried before a "People's Court" after almost a month of interrogation. Ward's word for the year-and-a-month was "hellish."

Miss Braden, 28, wasn't imprisoned or harried by questioners. The only single American girl in Mukden, she lived in a world consisting of the single city block between her residence and the consulate—a world bounded by walls and armed guards.

Her one-word description is "uncertain."

Miss Braden will be joined today in official visits to the State Department by Ward and most of the other "spies." Already in town is Vice Consul Fred Hubbard of Edgemont, S. Dak.

The dates of those 13 months have particular permanence for Miss Braden. It was, for example, on November 28, 1948, at noon, that electricity and telephone service in the consulate were turned off. That was after such other "uncertainties" as the week-long bombing of Mukden and the occupation of the city by the victorious Communist army.

Always Under Guard

From November 20 to December 4, consulate members were kept under guard at their residences. Then, after negotiations between Ward and the Communists, the months of daily trips to the consulate and back began—always under guard.

For Miss Braden, a clerk, "there actually wasn't much to do.

"We only went to 'keep face,' to show we weren't impressed," she said.

The Washington Post
MISS MARY BRADEN
. . . "Uncertain" months

In between those living in Miss Braden's compound read or talked about such things as lobster. Once electricity was turned on again—the Communist mayor's gift to the Americans on Christmas, 1948—they listened to the radio. In the summer they took sun baths and raised a truck garden to supplement canned foods.

During a six-week strike by their Chinese servants, Miss Braden tried her hand at cooking.

"The only time I lost my weight was during this period," she joked.

What wasn't to be joked at was the silence from America. Miss Braden received only a few letters from her family. She was allowed to send few messages.

The silence from official America—what was being done to release them—was almost as bad.

"We didn't know what was happening. We hoped we weren't forgotten," she said.

Although she was in the consulate at the time Ward was charged—by the Communists—to have beaten two Chinese laborrs, Miss Braden didn't see what happened.

Of the imprisonment of Ward and the other four, Miss Braden recalls their prison diet of bread and water was supplemented with food from consulate stores.

"They all come out looking haggard. All had beards. Mr. Ward had a Vandyke before, but now, it was a full beard."

The best date of all for Miss Braden to remember was December 3, 1949—at 3:30 p. m.

Deportation News

"That was when William Stokes (another vice consul) told us we were going to be deported."

Four days later, after a 40-hour train trip, thay arrived in Tientsin, China, and on December 12 were aboard ship.

Miss Braden arrived in the United States last week, came to Washington Saturday. Meeting her were her mother, Mrs. Eugene Braden, her two sisters, Miss Blanche K. Braden, an Agriculture Department employe, and Mrs. James T. Haden; a brother, Bob, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Donald Braden, of Arlington. She is living with her sister Blanche at 2212 I st. nw.

additional 355 square miles of mainland is held on a lease that runs until 1997. There has long been Chinese Nationalist sentiment for restoration of Chinese sovereignty. The Communists have not yet expressed their attitude on the subject.

A Foreign Office spokesman in London declined to comment on the possibility that the Chinese Communists might seek to bargain with Britain before accepting diplomatic recognition.

The spokesman said no reply had been received as yet from its recognition offer. Other official sources said a delay was not unexpected. They said communications were slow and that in the past Chinese Communist reaction to major developments was usually delayed from three days to a week.

(It was expected in London that the first reaction from Peiping would be comment from the Reds' China news agency. Thus the Communists could react without having their views bear a completely official stamp.)

There was not much yet to support the theory that the Reds will haggle over British recognition, but it was generally felt in Hongkong that they could be depended upon to do everything possible to further aggravate British-American relations.

On Formosa, island refuge of the Nationalists, a senior official suggested wryly that the Reds doubtless had referred Britain's recognition of January 6 to Moscow for guidance.

This official, who insisted on anonymity, noted that when Russia recognized the Peiping regime on January 10, Chinese Red acceptance was immediately and jubilantly proclaimed.

In contrast, he remarked that India's recognition, extended December 30, had drawn a delayed offer to "negotiate."

There is no question that British and American friction over Red China has been building up in these parts for some months. Many Americans believe the British are compromising on principle for the sake of trade. It must be noted, however, that many American businessmen here want recognition for exactly the same reason the British do—to open up trade.

There are many divisions of opinion on all sides, and the Reds can be expected to try to make the most of them.

agency, in a radio dispatch monitored here, said the demand was contained in a telegram sent to U. N. Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary General Trygve Lie, and various nations now members of the Security Council. The message was signed by Chou En-lai, Chinese Communist foreign minister.

In the version released here, Yugoslavia, a new member of the council, was omitted from the list of those to whom the message was addressed. Delegations listed as addressees were those of the Soviet Union, United States, France, United Kingdom, Ecuador, India, Cuba, Egypt and Norway.

Yugoslavia recognizes the Communist Chinese regime but is feuding with the Soviet Union.

Police said the bandit was 41-year-old Salogero Ciaccio, who was known as Giuliano's "Flying Black Messenger of Death."

Ciaccio got his designation from his swift rides on a black horse, during which he terrorized the population of the provinces of Palermo, Agrigento and Trapani.

Quirino Expects Philippines Will Recognize Chinese Reds

San Francisco, Jan. 8. (AP).—President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines forecast here today that the Chinese Communist government may be eventually recognized by his country under certain conditions.

Quirino, greeted enthusiastically by several hundred Filipino nationals at the San Francisco Airport, is enroute to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for a kidney stone operation.

After he stepped off his chartered Philippines Air Line plane "Mindoro," newsmen asked the President whether his Republic would recognize the new Red regime in Peiping:

"Well, certainly," he replied then added:

"If they get complete control of the country and if the government is accepted by the people and if they can maintain law and order as recognized by international law, you can't help recognize the government."

Quirino, recently elected to a new four-year term, last year joined with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China in urging formation of a Pacific union to combat Communism.

Quirino declined comment on Formosa, the big island outpost of the Chinese Nationalists lying between the Philippines and the mainland of China.

Reporters inquired whether the President intended to see his Philippine opera singer, Conchita Gaston, 22, in New York, but he brushed aside the questions about their reported romance. Quirino's wife was slain by the Japanese during the war.

U. S.-Jap Alliance Is Reported Topic

Tokyo, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Dr. Philip C. Jessup, State Department roving ambassador, have discussed the possibility of a Japanese-American alliance under which the United States would agree to defend this disarmed country, diplomatc quarters believed today.

MacArthur is believed to have raised the question.

It is expected that MacArthur will pursue the subject when the American Joint Chiefs of Staff visit Tokyo next month.

Jessup arrived here Thursday at the start of a Far Eastern tour to discuss a wide range of problems and especially a Japanese peace treaty.

Nothing has been made public regarding the talks between MacArthur and Jessup.

The biggest probem MacArthur and Jessup have for discussion is the possibility that the Western powers may have to write a separate peace treaty for Japan without the participation of Russia and China. If such a treaty is written, it is believed here that the signatory countries may be asked to guarantee Japan's defense.

U. S. Anti-Crime Conference Praised by National Groups

peccable bankers and contributes heavily to worthy causes," and who avoids "overt connection with the underworld," enhancing his "protective coloration through holdings in the realm of respected business."

2. United States Conference of Mayors: Paul V. Betters, head of the Washington office, said the conference president. Mayor W. Cooper Green of Birmingham, Ala., will name the group's five delegates. He said the conference is very much interested in the crime conference and pointed out that many mayors have been warring on organized racketeers.

3. National Association of Attorneys General: From Chicago, Frank Bane, executive director of the group's secretariat, said the conference is "something badly needed and very important." He pointed to a resolution of the last annual convention of the Attorneys General which said that "organized gambling has crossed State lines and is being operated in the fields of bookmaking, slot machines and numbers rackets on a national scale."

The resolution said that "these schemes involve interstate contracts, national syndicates and communications systems such as horse racing and telephone and telegraph facilities which furnish direct racing information for illegal bookmaking establishments and is therefore a matter for concern of both State and Federal agencies having jurisdiction over interstate crimes."

The Attorneys General pointed out that "the laws of the United States forbid the use of the instrumentalities of interstate commerce and the mails in furtherance of these criminal schemes."

Cooperation Sought

Hence the group "resolved" that Attorney General McGrath, the Justice Department he heads, the FBI under his control and the Federal Communications Commission "be called upon to give full attention and cooperation to the enforcement of Federal laws and to cooperate with State and local law enforcement agencies in the investigation, prosecution and conviction of persons and conspiracies operating for the purpose of violating State and Federal laws designed to stamp out gambling."

4. National Institute of Municipal Law Officers: Charles S. Rhyne, general counsel and Washington representative, said his group has been cooperating with the Federal Government only on civil law problems, already has named its delegates to the crime conference and soon will begin staff work on matters to be considered.

Field Wide Open

"There has been no co-ordination of efforts in drafting statutes on the State and local level in attacking the rackets," Rhyne said: "This is a wide open field. I think they're going to have to explore State, local and Federal laws in any new approach to racketeering, if any local prosecution is to be expected."

Delegates from this group will be Robert D. Morrison, the president, who is city attorney for Lynchburg, Va.; John P. McGrath, corporation counsel, New York City; Alexander G. Brown, city attorney, Portland, Oreg.; Benjamin Adamowski, corportaion counsel Chicago, and Anne X. Alpern, city solicitor, Pittsburgh.

Newspaper Strike Enters 4th Week At Little Rock

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 8. (AP). The strike of about 33 editorial and circulation workers at the Arkansas Gazette entered its fourth week today. An early settlement is not in sight.

Arkansas Labor Commissioner C. K. Call said he planned to talk to both sides this week There hasn't been much progress, he added.

The strikers, members of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO), left their jobs December 17, when negotiations broke down on a working contract.

Chief issues is the Guild's demand that it have a voice in dismissal of employes. Management says it should have final say. Wages are not involved.

Publication of the Gazette has not been affected by the walkout. A staff of supervisory employes, editorial writers and four reporters is getting out the paper. The Gazette employs about 40 on its news and photographic staff.

Poland Fixes New Controls On Retailers

Warsaw, Jan. 8 (NYHT).—Poland, largest and most individualistic of the Soviet satellites, has put into effect two measures against retail trade that probably constitute the beginning of the end of private enterprise.

The first measure establishes a network of state-owned retail shops in six provincial cities. The second forces all merchants to belong to a "compulsory organization of private trade," which will allow the government to conduct overall planning and prepare the way for the time when all stores will be state owned.

Although all industries employing more than 100 persons were nationalized in 1946, the new drive still has a wide field to cover. In late 1948, Economic Minister Hilary Minc estimated that 70 percent of retail trade was handled by private initiative. This was private enterprise's last real stronghold in Poland. According to the last official figures on the subject, private enterprise in Poland, including small factories, employed about 25 percent of the industrial population.

The state-owned stores will sell everything from shoes to food and cosmetics. They will have every advantage in competition with private retail trade by having guaranteed access to goods produced by nationalized industry. Private stores can be shut off from their supplies any time that the government believes that state shops are efficient enough to supplant them.

According to the official announcement, the "compulsory trade organization" established by the second decree will shift private retail trade into over-all state planning.

China Reds Will Sweep Tibet, Major Soviet Papers Declare

Moscow, Jan. 8 (AP).—Both of Russia's biggest newspapers today declared that lama-ruled Tibet is to be swept out of its classic centuries-old isolation into the dynamic stream of world communism.

Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, said it was as "clear as daylight" that Chinese Communists are "fully resolved to liberate all Chinese territory"—Tibet as well as Formosa and Hainan Islands.

Pravda said there was "no doubt" this task would be carried out, though the "people's democratic government of China is deprived of any aggressive strivings whatsoever."

Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, made a similar declaration in an editorial.

Charges "Smoke Screen"

At the same time, Izvestia charged that President Truman's statement on Formosa was a "smoke screen" to conceal American "aggressive intentions" aimed at both Formosa and Hainan.

American military preparations on Formosa, the paper charged, were continuing without interruption, and Secretary of State Dean Acheson had disclosed American intentions.

President Truman said on Thursday the United States "has no predatory designs on Formosa or on any other Chinese territory." has no desire to establish military bases on Formosa and will not use its armed forces or provide military aid or advice to Chinese forces on Formosa.

(Tibet, a land of about three million people and slightly bigger than Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico together, recently was described by radio commentator Lowell Thomas as the "most anti-Communist country in the world.")

American "imperialists," Pravda declared, continue to give military help to Chiang Kai-shek and continue to build military plans for strengthening the resistance of bases on Hainan and Formosa.

Izvestia said Acheson "gave the whole game away by his statement elaborating Truman's declaration." The paper reported Acheson at his news conference Thursday "said there were no obstacles to demobilized American officers assisting the Kuomintang and no obstacles to the sale of weapons to them.

Izvestia also cited an Acheson statement that American policy towards China has not changed.

Acheson, Izvestia continued, "in fact confirmed foreign press reports that ruling circles in the United States are continuing a bankrupt aggressive policy towards China and are trying to bring to life the political corpse called the 'government' of Chiang Kai-shek."

Mr. Truman's statement was made "evidently in order to calm American public opinion and to mask continuation of the aggressive policy towards China," the Government paper said.

Maine Potato Men Set Business Pace

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Maine potato growers, who two years ago sold most of their crop to the Government under price supports, are setting the pace for other States in going after new retail business, the Agriculture Department reports.

For the first time, the Production and Marketing Administration said yesterday, Maine shippers are packing potatoes under a new grading system designed especially for consumers.

"Retailers report that bins graded under the new system are usually completely emptied at the end of the day, while bins graded under the old system usually contain a residue of cut, broken, sunburned, or small potatoes, PMA reported.

Although the new consumer grades for potatoes were announced by the Agriculture Department in December, 1947, it was not until this year that potatoes were marketed in these grades. Five big Maine shippers are now packing and marketing potatoes in 10 and 50-pound bags under the new plan.

The five grades are:

1. U. S. Grade A Small: 1½ to 2¼ inches in diameter.
2. U. S. Grade A Medium: 2¼ to 3 inches.
3. U. S. Grade A Medium to Large: 2¼ to 4 inches in diameter.
4. U. S. Grade A Large: 3 to 4 inches in diameter.
5. U. S. Grade B: under this, potatoes are grouped for size in the same way as Grade A, but this grade allows for more defects.

Potatoes that fail to meet the requirements of any of these grades are called "off grade." The new grades differ from other Department of Agriculture grades, used for years by growers, in that they are more rigid in regard to quality, size, and cleanliness.

Because Maine has taken the lead in grading potatoes under the new system, the distribution of these packaged potatoes is now limited almost entirely to the Eastern Seaboard. Many are being sold now in Washington.

Because of the cost of packing and sorting, they sell for slightly more than the regular run of potatoes, PMA pointed out.

Wife Sees 'Date' Slain by Husband

MRS. MARJORIE JONES, 22, of Toledo, Ohio, yesterday told police in El Paso, Tex., how her husband, T/Sergt. Kenneth L. Jones, 26, slew her escort, Frank Pukli, jr., 33-year-old El Paso businesman, at the door of her apartment early Saturday. The sergeant, stationed at Biggs Air Force Base, near El Paso, has confessed, police say.

Mental Ward Blaze Killed Forty Women

Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 8 (AP).—Coroner C. H. Wildman said tonight that 40 women died in the fire yesterday in which screaming patients perished behind barred windows of a hospital mental ward.

Wildman boosted the toll to 40 after checking morgues and hospital records.

He said 38 patients and one graduate nurse who was on duty died in the fire. Another patient died later in a hospital.

Twenty-four persons were saved. Of these, seven had been removed to their homes today.

Wilman said 19 of the bodies had been identified and 15 tentatively identified. It was impossible to identify the other seven, he said.

Meanwhile, fire Chief Lester Schick told of the difficulties of learning the cause of the fire.

Schick, who reported he had talked to some of the 24 survivors, said the cause of the fire may never be known. He said he planned to talk to others who had been in the 81year-old psychiatric building at Mercy Hospital when it flared into an inferno.

"The questioning involves mostly mental patients," Schick said. "The validity of their testimony is extremely doubtful. I doubt if we ever find out what caused the fire."

The fire chief said no one has yet been found who could throw light on the fire's origin. He said the search for bodies was conducted with a bulldozer and a clam-shell crane, and that the debris was disturbed so much physical clews to the fire may have been obliterated.

Mystery Fire Damages Colorado Reformatory

Buena Vista, Colo., Jan 8 (AP).—A mysterious fire swept through part of the State Reformatory building here today, causing damage estimated by Warden James S. Thomas at $175,000. No one was injured.

The blaze, discovered at 8:15 a. m., was brought under control in about three hours. The dining hall, kitchen and gymnasium were destroyed and cell blocks damaged.

The 222 prisoners were eating breakfast when the fire broke out in the second-floor gymnasium. Guards quickly herded them out of the building and some of the prisoners aided in battling the blaze.

Gov. Lee Knous sent a National Guard mobile kitchen from Denver to feed the prisoners during the emergency.

Indo-Pakistan

At Colombo, Ceylon's capital, there are gathered today the foreign ministers of the Commonwealth countries to discuss how to cope with Asia-in-revolt. If the Commonwealth were a bloc, there might be some hope of wise decisions about other countries—decisions which, moreover, would be of benefit to American policy. But it would be sheer escapism on the part of the Commonwealth members to talk about other countries. For their own inter-relations stand grievously, even critically, in need of repair; particularly and immediately, those of India and Pakistan. The first necessity in making the Commonwealth count in Asia is thus a settlement of the Indo-Pakistan quarrel.

The quarrel is by no means limited to the dispute over the status of Kashmir. Kashmir is merely one item in a variety of misunderstandings which form an integrated complex. They are rooted in the partition. This has become a hostile and an unnatural severance. Jute is grown in Pakistan, yet the jute mills are in India, and the two are being kept apart. The result is that India's great port of Calcutta, where the jute mills are located, faces shutdowns and riots. India is denying to Pakistan the coal upon which Pakistan depends and for which she now has to go to far-away Poland. Pakistan is making refugees every day of the Hindus living in Pakistan. So the war goes on, with trade at a complete standstill between two countries which are complementary in their economics, and the two budgets dedicated almost exclusively to the support of rival military establishments.

There has been some talk of a no-war pact, without, however, easing the tension. In both countries there are diehards and hotheads who think that an Indo-Pakistan shooting war is inevitable. Even Deputy Premier Patel—who, with Premier Nehru, sparks the Indian government—spoke last week as if he were preparing the Indian people for hostilities. Where does Premier Nehru stand? He is, as the world knows, a man of peace, but in the present crisis has appeared strangely indisposed to do anything that would demobilize the bristling belligerence in which the Indo-Pakistan border is invested. The appearance is one of complete deadlock. Unfortunately, there can be nothing static in a deadlock that is paralyzing economic life and shortening political tempers; it is the kind of situation that is leading both countries downhill into a clash.

The crisis is of vast significance to the whole of Asia, including the Middle East. The Indian subcontinent is one of the few areas of stability left in Asia, and an Indo-Pakistan war would plunge that immense and teeming territory into chaos, and, furthermore, could never be localized. At Colombo the delegates would be remiss if they did not come to grips with this, their own problem, instead of talking about the problems of other peoples. Mediation across the board, in short, is necessary. The United States and the Monetary Fund (for a currency war is one of the difficulties) ought to participate in and therefore strengthen the mediation of this ugly Indo-Pakistan quarrel, instead of sitting idly by and waiting for it to blow up.

Free Marriage

The greater freedom in marriage choice for Indian women, including abolition of caste barriers and liberalization of divorce and the right of inheritance, that the Hindu code bill provides is presenting a hard decision to many of its beneficiaries. Feminine leaders generally are working for the reform. But among the masses many women are afraid that a change in a marriage system thousands of years old will lessen their security. And there is strong feeling in India that the prearranged marriage has its advantages. Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, Congress Party president, recently remarked in Parliament, "Hindus marry and then love, whereas English love and then marry and then forget about love." Many other Hindus feel that arranged marriages, even among strangers, usually result in successful unions.

The prearranged marriage system now is being questioned throughout the world. In some countries, as in India, women untrained for making their way in the world are fearful of being thrown on their own if masculine "protection" is not arranged. This is especially true in countries having a surplus of women. In Japan there is already reported some nostalgia for the patriarchal system that guaranteed a woman shelter under some kind of a roof. However, the general trend is toward freedom of choice in marriage—a principle that the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women has officially indorsed. But apparently women are going to have to pay for the right of marrying whom they please by accepting the responsibility to stand on their own feet if proper candidates for husbands are lacking.

CED Budget Plan

The Committee for Economic Development has outlined a budget program that would cut Government expenditures by 6.7 billion dollars, making it possible to reduce taxes about 2.25 billion and create a surplus of three billion for debt retirement in a year of high employment. The recommendations for reductions in Government outlays appear to be entirely feasible, though in some cases legislative authorization would be required to effect them. As the CED report explains, five billion dollars of the proposed reduction in expenditures would be brought about by elimination of nonrecurrent outlays for veterans' life insurance dividends, planned declines in foreign aid, and lower unemployment compensation payments, assuming employment reaches maximum levels next year.

Tax reduction recommendations, including revision of excise tax rates, partial elimination of double taxation of dividends, and changes in methods of computing taxable corporate net income are high on the priority list of most advocates of tax reform. Although any substantial reductions in tax burdens should be deferred until Government spending has been drastically curtailed, the CED's emphasis on the imperative need for lightening the burden of taxation at an early date is calculated to spur economy efforts, and underline the importance of a cautious and selective tax reform program aimed primarily at removal of inequities.

The CED program is based on a novel principle of budget planning that makes it seem somewhat unrealistic from the viewpoint of the average man. For 1950-51 receipts and expenditures figures are based on estimates of what income and outgo would be at very high levels of employment (specifically with only 2.5 million of the labor force unemployed). If unemployment is above 2.5 million, actual budget receipts may diverge widely from the estimated returns and deficits may result. That would not necessitate changing the CED recommendations, since under its so-called stabilizing budget policy, the surpluses of years of maximum employment are expected to cancel out the deficits of bad years.

The policy of annual budget balancing unquestionably accentuates business fluctuations, deepening depressions and encouraging tax reduction or extravagant spending in boom years. Consequently, the CED advocates setting tax rates at levels that would produce surpluses in years of high employment. It favors retention of those rates, regardless of the state of business, unless there are compelling reasons for reducing taxes or major changes in national policies or in economic conditions that require tax increases. This stabilizing budget policy is, in our opinion, a sound theoretical approach to solution of long-range budgetary problems, though the political obstacles to its acceptance as a guiding principle for budget-making are formidable.

CED budget figures are also based on the cash budget instead of the administrative budget. Since the latter includes many interagency transactions that do not affect the amount of money held by the public, it cannot be relied on to measure the inflationary or deflationary effects of fiscal operations on the general economy. To be sure, the administrative budget will always be indispensable as an administrative control agency; it also provides information that is essential to an understanding of the long-range financial position of the Government. Without such a guide, spending projects whose initial cost is slight might develop into burdensome future commitments. The cash budget, however, showing the actual amount of money received from and paid to the public in any given year, including payments into and out of insurance trust funds, gives a much clearer picture of the immediate effect of Government spending and taxing on the general economy.

The CED's stabilizing budget policy and its use of the cash budget method of presentation are innovations that Congress may well study as an aid to better understanding of budgetary problems. Moreover, the CED suggestions for curtailing expenditures and correcting tax inequities deserve consideration on their merits, regardless of whether budget estimates are fitted into the framework of a stabilizing cash budget or the administrative budget.

Isaiah Bowman

Political geography is the science that deals with soil, topography and population in relation to the problems of economics and government. It is a very large subject, which in some sense embraces nearly all the other natural and social sciences; but until rather recent years it held little interest for the majority of Americans. And for this reason they were largely unaware of the real eminence and importance of Dr. Isaiah Bowman or why he was so often called into consultation by the highest authorities of the Government. When they thought of him at all, it was as the president of Johns Hopkins University, who by abolishing all athletic scholarships, had relegated that institution to a place of obscurity in the sports news.

Yet Dr. Bowman, whose funeral was held yesterday in Baltimore, was probably the world's greatest political geographer. His knowledge of the earth and its peoples was encyclopedic and was carried for the most part in his head. His memory for detail was a constant amazement to his colleagues; it has been said of him that he could state without reference or hesitation the width and depth of almost any of the world's rivers at any point on its course, the yield of almost any important crop grown anywhere in any season or the precise proportion of one race to another in any place where there was an admixture of races.

He was beyond any doubt the best-informed member of the American peace delegation which in 1920 accompanied President Wilson to Versailles. It was there that he acquired a certain exasperation with European political thought that seems to to have remained with him the rest of his life. The European statesmen, as it seemed to him, were constantly injecting historical irrelevancies into political questions that should have been settled upon a basis of common sense and of economic facts. Toward the end of his life he developed an even greater sense of exasperation toward the Russians, whose purposes became clearly apparent to him when he served on the American delegation at the Dunbarton Oaks and San Francisco conferences. He was among the first to perceive and to assert publicly that, notwithstanding all their fair words during the war against Hitler, the Russians had never abandoned their plan of communizing the world.

East Capitol Bridge

District Commissioners have taken the Anacostia Bridge controversy by the horns in coming out flatly for a new span at East Capitol st. Presumably this means that they are prepared to recommend specific money for this urgently needed relief. On balance we believe the Commissioners have made the right decision, and we hope a long squabble with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission can be avoided.

It is true that a Massachusetts ave. bridge, which the Park and Planning Commission has favored, would cross the Anacostia River at a narrow point and would be close to the Pennsylvania ave. (Sousa) Bridge, where bad jams are now occurring. But it would also split Gallinger Hospital, in which the District has some 12 million dollars invested, and it would serve only two connecting Maryland roads.

Although the East Capitol Street Bridge would require a span across Kingman Lake as well as across the Anacostia River, the cost would by no means be doubled. It would connect with four principal Maryland highways, including one that would be served by the Massachusetts ave. span. More important, it would relieve the heavily populated area north of Fort Dupont Park which is the source of much of the congestion on the Sousa Bridge. It would serve as an outlet for the projected East Capitol st. mall, and authorities have promised that it would not interfere with the sesquicentennial grounds or sports center.

The impasse between the Highway Department and the Park and Planning Commission emphasizes one of the flaws in Washington's city planning and points to the necessity for the two agencies to get together on such essentials as population estimates. For example, the Park and Planning Commission is using theoretical estimates projected from 1940 figures, whereas the Highway Department has actually conducted scientific samplings in the area. The main consideration about the new bridge ought to be to strike a balance between possible future needs and the unquestionably great need for relief from present congestion. The East Capitol st. site seems to us to do just that.

Taxpayers' Blues

Perhaps the most welcome news Virginia taxpayers couid have, other than that some way had been found to abrogate taxes altogether, is that a move is afoot to simplify income-tax forms. The Arlington delegation to the General Assembly is promoting a bill to standardize State income-tax exemptions to coincide with Federal tax blanks and also to provide a short form return which does not now exist. This move conforms closely to recent recommendations of the State Tax Study Commission.

Existing Virginia tax forms are a mess, combining income-tax data with personal property and assorted other taxes. Inordinately detailed, they do not permit such Federal deductions as medical expenses. The fact that the filing deadline is May 1, a month and a half after the Federal deadline, means that many taxpayers have misplaced or forgotten essential information and must spend many frustrating hours burning the midnight oil. While the tax reformers are at it, they might well consider advancing the filing date to the Federal deadline and advancing the payment deadline from December 5 to permit a reasonable time to recover from the blow before Christmas. Taxpaying is never exactly a pleasant business, but the introduction of sensible standardization in Virginia would relieve it of at least some of the unpleasantness.

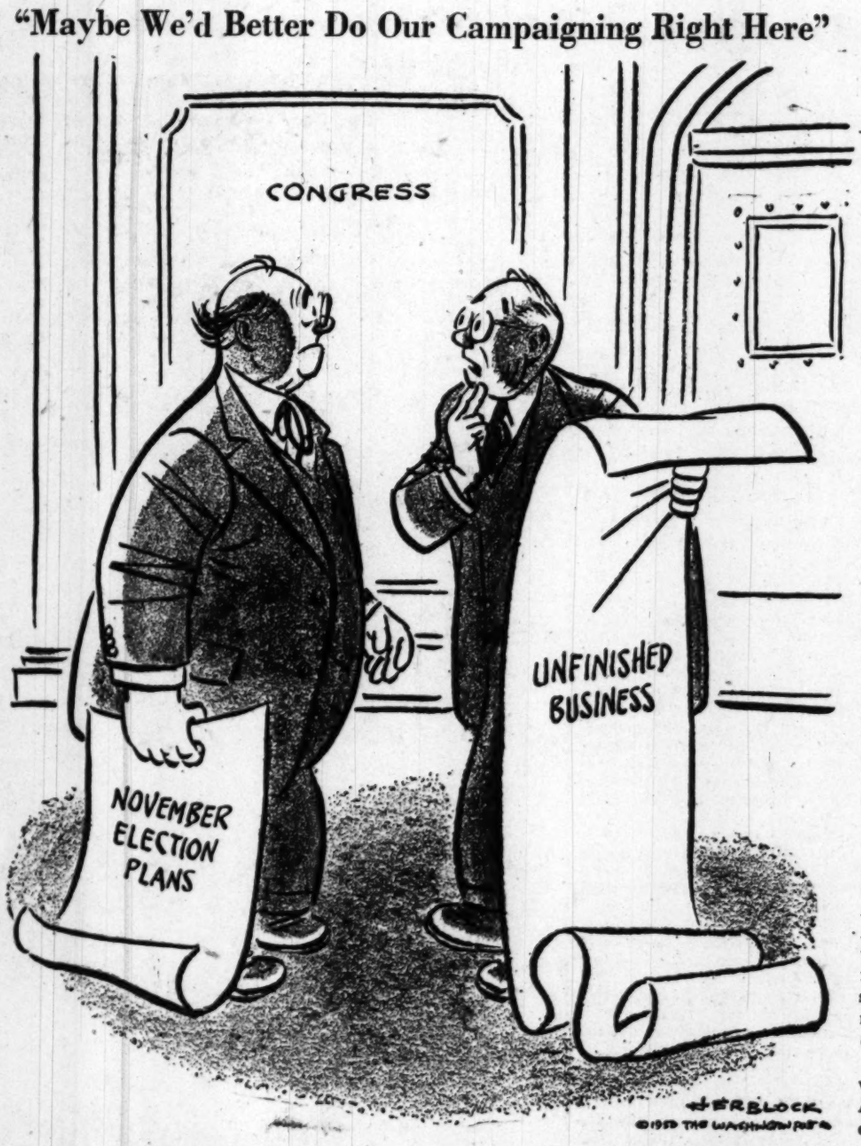

NOT JUST FOR FREEDOM

For what we prize let us give thanks today:
Not just for freedom, but for the deep desire
Of freedom, kindling, spreading fire from fire
In every breast; not for the piled array
Of goods and comforts that surround our way,
But for creativeness that does not tire;
Not that we live, but that men's souls require
To walk with justice, and to serve and pray.

For destiny we may not understand
But reach for as life reaches for the light;
For comfort of the steady heart and hand,
And faith in morning through the raging night;
For strength enduring what the day may be,
And for great courage that goes quietly.

CLARE SHIPMAN.

"Sustaining Chiang"

In your January 2 editorial, "Sustaining Chiang," you advocate that in order to "regain a free hand in Asia" we "embark upon a policy of nonintervention, anticolonialism and anti-aggression." You oppose sustaining Chiang Kai-shek "in the former Japanese possession" of Formosa, with the advice and counsel of an American military mission.

Formosa, however, is not a "former Japanese possession." It is a Japanese possession. Neither the Cairo Declaration or the Yalta Agreement had the legal effect of turning Formosa over to the Nationalist government of China. That has still to be done. And it can only be done by a peace treaty with Japan, in which Japan signs away both Formosa, Southern Sakhalin, the Kuriles and her rights in Manchuria. Until such a treaty is signed by Japan, these areas and these rights are Japanese, no matter who occupies them.

If we really wish to embark upon the policies you propose, therefore, we have an excellent opportunity to do so. We can oppose Russia's intervention on behalf of the Chinese Communists, Russia's colonialism in seizing the Kuriles and Sakhalin, and Russia's aggression in forcing China (at our behest) to turn over Port Arthur as a potent submarine base (ice free all the year round) by a treaty signed eight days after we had dropped the bomb on Hiroshima which practically ended the war. We can oppose all this by a simple declaration of fact. All these territories and rights still belong to Japan.

If we recognize these facts, we shall have dispelled a great many misleading inferences. One is that in sending a military mission to Formosa we are sustaining Chiang. What we would be sustaining would be Japan's legal title to Formosa until a peace treaty made other disposition of it. What we would be sustaining would be the policy of nonintervention, anticolonialism and antiaggression. This puts the Chinese Communists on the defensive if they attempt to take Formosa. As the occupational authority in Japan, the Allied High Command would have every right to resist such occupation of territory under its aegis. The Russians in Sakhalin, the Kuriles and in Port Arthur would be there by sufferance, not by legal right.

When it is easy to turn a defensive position into an offensive one, to "regain a free hand in Asia," it seems remarkable that we hesitate to do so.

Falls Church Manager

The City of Falls Church is considering a new charter. This charter as now drafted would establish a council-manager system according to recommendations of qualified experts in the field of public administration.

Whether this charter secures better government for the people depends not so much on the provisions of the charter itself as it does on the philosophy of the council respecting the practical application of it. It is essential that the councilmen understand and be willing to give fair trial to the modern concept of council-manager relationships.

Some of the incumbent councilmen have shown a reluctance to entrust the present city manager with authority to handle the technical details of management. They have, on several occasions, overridden or delayed action on his professional recommendations in matters of engineering—despite the fact that he is a licensed professional engineer and no one on the council is so qualified.

Let us hope that the incumbent and future councilmen will have the wisdom to let the city manager do the managing; that they will trust his professional judgment in management matters; that they will stick to the business of settling basic policies, objectives, and financial limits; that they will judge the manager by his accomplishments rather than his methods so long as they are within the bounds of propriety.

Montgomery Democrats

One wonders what kind of reasoning by some members of the Montgomery County Democratic State Central Committee led them to the unwarranted and erroneous conclusion reported in The Washington Post of January 2.

So-called "dissident Democrats" did not contribute to and actually initiate a "Dollars from Democrats" drive because of "dissatisfaction with the emphasis on nonpartisan government." They contributed because they were invited publicly, as registered Democrats, to help the State Central Committee unify the party.

The problem of local nonpartisan elections will be decided by the Maryland courts. It would be presumptuous to draw any conclusions on that score until the courts have spoken.

Was the invitation for all Democrats to unite issued with reservations? Only the State Central Committee can answer that one.

Red Feather

In thanking you for your editorial of December 31 concerning the 1950 Community Chest Federation campaign, May I express the heartfelt appreciation of the campaign committee for the cooperation extended to this enterprise by The Washington Post.

Your interest in the campaign from the beginning was a source of encouragement to all of us.

With Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Post, as one of our vice chairmen and Donald M. Bernard, your director of advertising, as chairman of campaign publicity committee, we thus drew on your executive staff for valuable policy-forming counsel.

The special articles by Miss Dorothea Andrews interpreting the needs met through the Red Feather agencies and her coverage of the campaign report lunchons won for her a well-deserved Red Feather "Oscar" at our last meeting.

The many helpful acts of your editorial, city room, and photographic staff should also be recognized.

Thanks to all this invaluable assistance we were able to lift the response of the National Capital community beyond last year's result although we fell short of our campaign goal.

FRANK J. LUCHS,
General Chairman, 1950 Red Feather Campaign.

Truman's Serenade

I wish I could draw a cartoon! I would show a two-faced Harry Truman serenading "free enterprise," which stands on a balcony of "business" while in the alley Truman's henchman, Oscar Ewing, is holding up the medical profession with a gun labeled "socialized medicine."

This sudden siren song entitled "Free Enterprise, I Love You" should be viewed with considerable caution. Less than a year ago, Truman was advocating Government control and restriction of some businesses. His sudden change should be seen for what it is—vote bait.

Indian-American Understanding

The people of India have been deeply impressed by the spirit of cordiality which the Americans of all classes evidenced in such abundant measure in welcoming Pandit Nehru to their country. To many Indians his reading of American society was a revolution. It enabled them to catch a glimpse of the basic strength of America and the ethical principles on which its democracy is founded. They have begun to realize that the many-sided progress of the United States is the outcome of a judicious blending of both moral and material values, without which it would not have been possible to build a social pattern that was so durable and of such colorful and sumptuous texture.

Pandit Nehru has certainly disabused the Indian mind of the notion that American civilization is pure materialism; and persuaded it of the fact, that for all their love of wealth and scientific knowledge, the Americans are keenly alive to moral and spiritual excellences and are a sentimental and warm-hearted people.

From every point of view, Pandit Nehru's visit to the United States has proved to be a highly beneficial event in the context of Indo-American relations. It has strengthened the common bonds and brought the two countries much nearer on the plane of mutual understanding. Sooner or later, on the basis of this reciprocity, our country is bound to orientate itself and determine its stand more precisely in relation to world politics.

The people of India have recognized the need of cultivating friendly relations with a country that stands for peace and freedom and had the initiative to work out a practical scheme to help the backward and handicapped nations of the world. The sharp antithesis between this attitude and the type of mentality that induces chaos and confusion is a striking sample of the great dualism that governs the world of man.

Pandit Nehru has always had a friendly feeling for the Chinese people, and for that he is universally respected in their country. Perhaps they remember that he and Tagore were the only two men in the whole world outside of China who raised their voices of protest at the time of the Japanese aggression. I should like to appeal to Mr. Acheson to pay due regard to this fact and work in close collaboration with Pandit Nehru in shaping his Chinese policy.

Pandit Nehru's advice to the Americans to become fearless, found an echo in every Indian heart. I hope America will profit by this advice and face the Atomic Age with a stout heart. There is a feeling in this country that the American people have become much too atom-minded. As a great nation, it would be more consonant with their dignity if they worried less about the matter. This atomania seems to be a nasty disease. A sense of supernatural awe has now come to be associated with it, as is evident from M. Vishinsky's latest allusion to the miraculous power of the atom bomb that has moved mountains in Russia.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Policy For Asia?

THE PERIOD OF American paralysis in Asia seems to be drawing to a close, judging by advance reports of the policy that Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson is to expound to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Whether this is really so, is the practical test of the Administration's decision to leave Formosa to its fate.

Formosa is, of course, immensely valuable, more because its surplus product can help to feed Japan, than because it has great strategic importance. By every possible test, however, whether economic or strategic or political Formosa is infinitely less valuable than the populous, incalculably wealthy Southeast Asiatic Peninsula. The practical objection to the MacArthur-Louis Johnson policy for Formosa has been, simply, that it would impede and perhaps hamstring any attempt to hold southeast Asia against the Communist advance from China.

THIS IS SO, for three reasons. First, a Formosan adventure would arouse suspicions of American imperialism all over Asia. But the first principle of the new American policy in Asia must be, and is, to ally ourselves with and support the new nationalism which is the strongest Asiatic force today.

Second, a Formosan adventure would also hopelessly divide our Asiatic policy from the policies of the other Western powers with Asiatic interests, and particularly from the policy of the British. Yet the second principle of our new Asiatic policy must be, and is, to secure the friendly cooperation of these former colonial powers, and particularly of the British, in the great task of putting the emerging new nations of Asia firmly on their feet.

Third, a Formosan adventure would surely alienate the leaders of the Asiatic nations, which are already independent, such as Pandit Nehru in India and President Soekarno and Premier Mohammed Hatta in Indonesia. Yet the third principle of our new Asiatic policy must be, and is, to induce Nehru and the others like him to take the lead in the effort to save Asia which we, as Westerners, can only aid and back up.

Simply by stating the objections to a Formosan adventure, the main themes of the new Asiatic policy have also been stated. There are, of course, various trimmings, of greater or lesser importance. Opening up active trade between southeast Asia, with its great surplus of agricultural products, and underfed, highly industrialized Japan, is one piece of trimming of the utmost importance to this country. Other, quite obvious trimmings are ECA aid and some military aid for the new Asiatic nations. The whole adds up to the outline of an intelligent policy to halt communism's Asiatic advance.

Although it is still vitally important to know why we went wrong in China, there could be no greater error than to judge the new Asiatic policy by our old China policy. There is really only one danger from the past.

The mark of our postwar China policy was an extreme reluctance to engage the United States, in the way that we engaged ourselves in Greece, for example. Yet the new Asiatic policy will be doomed to rapid failure unless this country now engages itself very boldly, politically and strategically as well as economically.

This is so for the simplest possible reason. Burma and Indo-China are the keys to southeast Asia. If Burma and Indo-China go the way of China, a chain reaction will have started, which will first consume Siam, Malaya and Indonesia, and then attack India, the Philippines and Japan. Yet Burma and Indo-China are both in imminent peril from strong, well-armed Communist movements. Talking about trade between Japan and southeast Asia before Burma and Indo-China have been made safe, is like planning the garden while the house is burning down.

SINCE THE SITUATION is so critical, no serious effort to save Asia, coordinating as it must economic and military aid, political influence and secret service activity, can possibly be carried on from Washington on a committee system. Yet the Far Eastern Division of the State Department has steadfastly opposed all projects for a flexible special organization to save Asia.

Equally, saving Asia will require taking considerable political risks, and spending a good deal more money than the dribs and drabs now available. Yet the first requirement is contrary to all the present inclimations of the State Department, and the second cuts across the Truman line of holding down all foreign policy outlays. In short, the Asiatic policy that looks so good in outline, may prove to be inadequate in practice. We must be ready to put up the cash, get into the mess, and even get our hands dirty. If the Senators cannot satisfy themselves on this point, they will then be justified in reopening the Formosa issue.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Formosa Crusade

A UNITED PRESS dispatch from Tokyo, written after the President's clean and honorable statement on Formosa, says "that one veteran member of General MacArthur's staff, who talks to the Commander-in-Chief daily, said it was obvious that the State Department's views were not drawn up by anyone with military experience."

Lippmann

Perhaps it is about time to remind the veteran member of General MacArthur's staff who talks daily to the Commander-in-Chief that in this Republic the President of the United States is General MacArthur's Commander-in-Chief. And so, soldiers who respect the traditions of the Republic have a duty and a right to submit their views through official channels to their superior. But while they wear the uniform of the United States, and especially when they are in a foreign country, they have no right whatsoever to conduct a public agitation, using the press and politicians as their mouthpiece, to challenge and discredit the policies of their Government. If they disagree with those policies and feel it their duty to make a public issue, they should ask to be relieved, should come home, should take off their uniforms, and then as civilians should exercise their rights as citizens to express their views.

IF THEY came out into the open and explained their views and had to debate them, it might just possibly become clearer than it is from the speeches of the interventionist Senators just what the Formosa business is about. It cannot be that these men of military experience really think that the Island of Formosa, 100 miles from the coast of China, some 15 minutes by air, within easy range of long-range missiles, would be a desirable place to lock up American troops and American equipment. They cannot wish to tie down American forces in the defense of such an exposed fixed postion, and to make of Formosa another and far more indefensible Bataan. Nor can they believe that the Red forces—Chinese or Russian—can do anything by sea, by air, or by invasion from Formosa that they cannot do far more conveniently from Shanghai, Foochow, Amoy, Canton and all the other ports and airfields along the 3000 miles of coast from Kamchatka to the Gulf of Tonking.

It is difficult to believe that the veteran member of General MacArthur's staff, or any other military man, will care to argue that Formosa, in American hands, would be a necessary asset to our strategic security and not a dangerous liability.

AS A matter of fact, the case for military intervention in Formosa really rests on the argument that we should wage an undeclared war against Red China. The argument for the undeclared war is that if we commit ourselves in Formosa, which has been solemnly declared to be Chinese territory, we cannot be at peace with the Peking government. We cannot recognize it. We cannot have de facto relations with it. We shall be openly at war with it if it attempts to take over Formosa.

The idea behind this is that if we can keep Red China nominally at war with Chiang, but really with us, Red China will not be able to demobilize and, therefore, will be unable to consolidate its victory and to carry out the economic reconstruction. If I had not heard this idea expounded by Senator Knowland himself, I would not have believed that anyone could think that the way to save Asia from communism was to make sure that the Communists had the biggest army in Asia.

THE SHEER lunacy of the idea comes from Senator Knowland's failure to ask himself what Mao Tse-tung would do with his army if he had to keep it mobilized and if he could not feed the Chinese people. Mao would have the most powerful army in eastern Asia, sitting around eating its head off while his people were starving. Can anyone think of a greater inducement and a greater provocation to make him use his undemobilized army to raid the rich and almost undefended countries to the south of him—to burst into Burma, Siam, and Indo-China?

And if that happens, because Senator Knowland has contrived to keep Red China mobilized, will he and Mr. Hoover and Senator Smith of New Jersey and Senator Taft send the Navy, or will they send General MacArthur, or will they merely send some military advisers, to defend human freedom in the jungles of Burma and in the ambuscades of Indo-China?

ALL THEY can accomplish by this agitation is to prevent this country from playing any useful part in Asia. Their effort to keep us embroiled with Red China in order to prevent recognition will mean, if they succeed, that we cannot collaborate with anyone in Asia. For every other nation with interests in Asia will soon have recognized Red China. Those nations cannot be at peace with Mao and at the same time allied with a government that is in effect at war with Mao.

SURELY as the night follows the day the absurdity and the practical confusion of such a posture on our part will soon be so self-evident that, in order to have any policy at all in Asia, we shall have to align ourselves with our friends and we shall have to recognize Mao's government. But then recognition will not be, as it is in the case of Britain and the other members of the Commonwealth, a recognition that the facts are what they are. Our recognition, if it is long delayed, if it is preceded by fierce debate, will be a recognition of our own defeat.

To Peking and to Moscow it will bring the immense prestige of having the strongest of the Western powers reverse itself and bow to the inevitable. The longer we wait, the more we emphasize the importance of the issue, the more we quarrel over the fallacy that recognition means approval, the more we shall lose face before the world and among the peoples of Asia.

used to prevent domestic crimes, with possibly one exception—kidnaping and extortion in the Federal sense.

"There is, however, one field in which, given the conditions in the world today, wiretapping is very much in the public interest." He further stated it should be "used against those persons not citizens of the United States and those few citizens who are traitors to their country, who today are engaged in espionage or sabotage against the United States."

Approved by Attorney General

The present policy, McGrath said, was spelled out in October, 1941, by Biddle as being "to authorize wiretapping in espionage, sabotage and kidnaping cases when the circumstances warrant."

He noted that "in each individual instance" the FBI must obtain "the express approval" of the Attorney General to use wiretapping.

As FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover has pointed out before, McGrath said, "there has been no concealment of the fact that wiretapping has been used in limited cases."

"There has been no new policy or procedure since the initial policy was stated by President Roosevelt," he concluded, "and this has continued to be the department policy whenever the security of the Nation is involved."

Richardson Backs Permanent Law on Loyalty

NYHT News Service

Recommendations for the continuance on a permanent basis of the President's Loyalty Review Board were made yesterday by Seth W. Richardson, board chairman who has supervised the screening of 2,800,000 employes in the Executive department of the Government.

Richardson said that while the board is nearing the end of its check on the loyalty of Government employes, a "suitable program" should be continued to investigate the 500,000 or so persons hired annually as replacements in the heavy Federal employment turnover. He added that if the "lawfulness and propriety" of the program is sustained by the courts in pending cases, no additional legislation to strengthen the board would be necessary.

Advocates of permanent loyalty laws have stressed that the present Review Board operates only under an executive order revokable at the pleasure of the President.

In reporting on the work of the board, which was organized two years ago at direction of President Truman to weed out disloyal employes, Richardson said that of an original 10,359 cases turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it has been necessary to recommend the discharge of only 139 persons. There are no figures on how many of those under investigation resigned voluntarily.

Taking note of charges that the loyalty checks have been a "witch hunt," Richardson asserted on a broadcast that the figures "show plainly" that there is "no evidence of any effort to harass employes" out of Government service. He said that the existence of the loyalty program acts as a deterrent to "unfit persons" who might otherwise seek Federal jobs.

Richardson said the large majority of employes found ineligible on loyalty grounds were associated with and cooperated with various Communist-front organizations.

IF THE SENATE APPROVES THE YELLOW OLEO BILL—(H. R. 2023)

WHO GETS HURT?

1. Consumers
No protection against butter imitations.

2. Taxpayers
Decline in butter sales will require more Federal Funds for price support.

3. Dairy Farmers and Their Families
More than 10,000,000 persons.

4. Employees of Dairy Plants With Their Families
1,000,000 strong.

5. Dairy Industries
Cheese, fluid milk, ice cream, dry milk, evaporated milk and related industries.

6. Local Merchants and Industries Supplying Farming

7. Soybean & Cottonseed Interests

WHO WILL BE HELPED?

1. 28 Oleo Corporations
(5 of whom control 2/3 of the business.)

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

It is obvious that the yellow oleo bill, supported by the oleomargarine interests, would seriously injure the butter market. Oleo spokesmen in Congress admit they seek to capture the entire spread market.

Butter is the balance wheel of the entire milk price structure. That is why the Federal Government is now supporting the price of butter—to stabilize all milk prices. What hurts butter hurts all milk products — the cheese, dry milk, evaporated milk, ice cream, and fluid milk industries. All are supporting dairy farmers in their fight against yellow oleo for this reason.

The yellow oleo bill will hurt consumers. It will greatly encourage the fraudulent passing off of yellow oleo as butter. It will enable oleo manufacturers to raise prices to consumers.

Soybean and cottonseed interests get more money for the meal they sell to the Nation's dairy farmers than they do from the oil they sell for oleomargarine.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

EQUAL TREATMENT FOR BOTH?

Much has been said about "equal treatment" for oleomargarine. Oleo now has these "special privileges!"

1. The right to hydrogenate raw fats—denied to butter.
2. The right to use preservatives—denied to butter.
3. The right to use artificial flavoring—denied to butter.
4. Freedom from sanitary regulations required of dairymen.

Is this fair?

A scientific survey shows that 4 out of 5 people who serve yellow oleo admit they call it butter. In this they merely reflect the propaganda of the oleo industry which seeks to camouflage its product with every attribute of butter.

The Federal Government should not be a party to wholesale fraud and deception on this scale. The Government, as well as the consumer, must be protected, for when either errs or suffers, the entire economy is shaken.

THE MAKINGS OF A feud, the first in the new National-American Pro Football League, developed the other night at the Touchdown Club's extravagant banquet at the Statler, when the sensitive ego of George Marshall reacted to the barbs of Otto Graham.

In contrast to the blushing figures of the other football heroes who stepped to the rostrum to receive their awards and retire happily to their seats on the dais, Graham proved eagerly articulate. That wasn't an upset. A year before, the husky quarterback of the Cleveland Browns, honored again as the top player in the All-American Conference, had made the first speech of the night.

POVICH

He was bristling the other night, though, after references to the "defunct" AAC, by the late commissioner, O. O. Kessing, who made the presentation to Graham. "That fact is," Graham quipped, "It was the Conference that absorbed the National Football League in the merger."

Graham declared that Marshall was "the man who had cost the league millions of dollars" by his stubbornness in opposing the merger. He added that the Browns would do all right,, "even after we move up with the big boys in the new league."

FROM THE OTHER end of the speakers' table, Marshall yelled that Graham might not be able to hold a job in the new league. Graham reminded him he had a two-year contract. The 1200 guests were enjoying the exchanges. If Marshall didn't, he will start taking some satisfaction out of the episode next season when he counts the gate receipts of the Redskins-Browns game.

The possibility is, of course, that the Redskins and Browns won't meet next season because of schedule quirks. But they are certain to meet in 1951, and there is little danger that Graham won't still be around quarterbacking the Browns. Graham has been one of the great ones, and the Redskins' Sammy Baugh has proved that a man can last as long as 13 years in the pro league.

If it is a feud, the Redskins' counting-room should welcome it. The Redskins haven't worked up a red-hot rivalry, the profitable kind, with any specific club since 1940, when they took that 73-0 licking from the Bears. The Bears-Skins feud wore off a couple years later. There are 80,000 seats to be filled in that big Cleveland Stadium, and Graham and Marshall could work nicely to that end.

THE NIGHT'S ORATORICAL honors were won, though, by a first-time starter at the Touchdown affairs—Bo Rowland, the George Washington U. coach. In his over-the-cracker-barrel style, the little GWU mentor recalled that he and President Truman's top assistant, John R. Steelman, had once played on the same school football team in Arkansas.

"The folks back home keep asking me how John is doing in Washington," grinned Rowland. "I was proud to tell 'em John was doing pretty good at the White House, but that I really didn't see much of him in Washington. In fact, I told 'em that I didn't get around to seeing him at all, and that he didn't phone me—John knows I'm a very busy man."

Notre Dame took a big early lead in the night's race for honors. In succession, Steve Sitko of the Irish was honored as the outstanding back in college football, and their Leon Hart was awarded the trophy as the best college lineman. A bit later, Frank Leahy was summoned to the rostrum to accept an award as the best coach. Irrepressible Texas got into the act later, though.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE Sam Rayburn, of Texas, had the last word as the man who introduced Kyle Rote, Southern Methodist's backfield ace. Rayburn gave Rote the trophy honoring his play in the Notre Dame game, which was voted the best single-game performance of any player during the year.

Aware of the early lead Notre Dame had picked up in the night's award of honors, Rayburn hauled in the story of the South Bend visitor to Texas who was being shown some of the State's historical highlights. "I might add," said Rayburn, "that this South Bend man had a slight Boston background. "Anyway, when we showed him the statue honoring the heroes of the Alamo, he asked who they were. We explained that 131 Texans had held off 20,000 Mexicans, killing the last 10,000 with their rifle butts after they ran out of ammunition.

"Then we showed him our statue of the Texas ranger, and he wanted to know about him, too. We told him this ranger had killed 126 outlaws single-handed. Then he started to brag a bit himself and he asked 'Ever head of Paul Revere?'

"'Revere?' we said, 'Oh, sure, isn't he the fellow who had to send for help?'"

Hoyas Face Nation's Top Teams This Week

Georgetown, after two straight losses, has another rough week ahead.

The Hoyas take on unbeaten Holy Cross, the Nation's sixth ranking team Tuesday; get a slight respite against Dartmouth Wednesday and then get a crack at the No. 1 team in the country, St. John's of Brooklyn, on Friday. All three games are on the road.

George Washington, currently in second place in the Southern Conference, also faces a tough week, with three games away from home. The Colonials take on Virginia Tech, Tuesday; Richmond, Wednesday and Maryland, Saturday.

Maryland entertains William and Mary, the No. 1 team in the Southern Conference, at College Park Tuesday, before invading Richmond for a game with the Spiders Thursday.

The Terps return home for their Saturday meeting with George Washington in a game that could give the Terps a strong claim to the Metropolitan area crown or could completely muddle the picture if G.W. comes through as expected.

U. of Mexico Here

Howard brings the University of Mexico into Uline's Arena for a game Thursday and Catholic and American tangle in an all-local Mason-Dixon Conference game Saturday to round out the top area games.

In Holy Cross, the Hoyas will be up against one of the highest scoring aggregations in the country. Bob Cousey, who set a new Crusader record with 34 points as Holy Cross swamped Boston College, 93-46, Saturday night to win its eleventh straight, is considered by many to be one of the best collegiate players in the nation today.

Zawoluk St. John's Ace

St. John's, with only a loss to CCNY marring a 14-game record boasts a sophomore sensation in Bob Zawoluk, who set a Madison Square Garden scoring record with 36 points against St. Joseph's of Philadelphia, Saturday.

George Washington should know better after this week what chances it has in the Southern Conference race. At the opening of the season, North Carolina State was considered a cinch to repeat as champion with the main competition coming from G.W. and Duke. However, Duke upset the Wolfpack, 58-55, Saturday to let William and Mary back into the loop lead with a 2-0 record.

Maryland needs at least one win and could well use two if it is to entertain hopes of going to the conference playoffs this year.

Half of Field In When Halted; Players Protest Conditions Early

Los Angeles, Jan. 8. (AP).—The third round of the $15,000 Los Angeles open golf tournament was washed out by rain today.

The tournament committee, after watching the downpour all day, finally cancelled the round late this afternoon.

Coming as an embarrassing moment in the lives of the members of the sponsoring Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce, the halt was called when the Riviera Country Club course, deeply submerged in spots, was deemed unplayable.

The unplayable conditions were brought sharply into focus by the tournament's sentimental favorite, Ben Hogan. He sent word to the club house that he would have to swim if he tried to cross a flooded barranca, or gulch, that cuts across the eleventh fairway.

The committee waded out, looked, and agreed. That's when the thing was called off.

Many of the golfers protested continuation of the tourney. They were visibly peeved about the situation, too.

National Open Champ Cary Middlecoff all but balked at teeing off in the deluge. Hogan threatened to walk out after nine holes.

Willie Hunter, Riviera's home pro, did walk out when officials refused to meet his demand for a postponement. So did Johnny Revolta. They're all reinstated, however.

Hogan summarized everybody's sentiment when he remarked:

"I'm willing to go on. Anbody got a rowboat?"

With all scores shot today wiped off the books, the round will be played tomorrow if possible, and the final 18 holes Tuesday.

Virtually all the contestants were happy about the decision be-

Mikan Gets 30 Points; Lakers Win In Overtime

Minneapolis, Jan. 8 (AP)—Minneapolis had to go into overtime to mark up its fourteenth home victory in the National Basketball Association tonight as it beat Boston, 85 to 80, before 6382 fans.

Jim Pollard, scoring two baskets, was the overtime ace as the Lakers racked up eight points against Sonny Hertzberg's long shot and Gene Englund's free throw.

The Lakers trailed most of the way and Pollard tied it up at 77-77 with 2:13 to go in regulation playing time.

Minneapolis stalled the last two minutes of the game to send it into overtime. Pollard wound up with 27 points, and Center George Mikan with 30.

Jockey Dies of Hurts In Three-Horse Spill

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 8 (AP)—A 23-year-old jockey from Baileyville, Kans., died today in a local hospital from injuries received in a three-horse spill during the running of yesterday's feature race at the Arizona State fairgrounds.

The jockey, Don Rettele, had undergone an emergency brain operation last night. He received a fractured skull and crushed chest when kicked by one of the three horses involved.

Dynamite, Titone Fight Here Tonight

Little Dynamite, the local featherweight hopeful, tangles with Charlie Titone, Brooklyn ace, in the 10-round feature on tonight's Turner's Arena card.

Dynamite, undefeated in 16 pro bouts, will probably be an underdog for the third straight time.

In his last two outings, against Leo LeBrun and Jose Cardenas, the powerfully built youngster was supposed to be out of his class, however, he upset the applecart by winning both.

Titone, has lost only six bouts in four years of campaigning. One of the defeats was inflicted by another local brightlight, Jimmy Cooper.

Titone, however, reversed the decision in a second meeting and the two drew in the rubber match of the series.

Both boys will be gunning for a shot at Cooper.

Another popular and promising local featherweight will display his wares in a five-round preliminary bout when Gene Smith takes on Tim Healy of New York.

Smith has won two fights since turning pro about a month ago, both by first-round knockouts. Other preliminary battles pit Pat Thomas, local lad seeking his thirteenth win in 14 pro fights, against Mexico's Manny Correa in a five, and Carl Minnis of New York against Washington's Sam Kelsey. The only four-rounder finds Kid Wolfe meeting Scott Richardson in an all-local bout.

Smith Paces St. Francis

Billy Smith scored 22 points to lead St. Francis de Sales to a 47-26 win over St. Jerome's in the opening round of the Cyo junior league yesterday in section 1 at the Nativity gym.

Other section 1 games saw St. Michael's, 39; Nativity, 12. St. Gabrial's, 34; St. Anthony's, 32. Campus School, 31; St. James, 29.

St. Dominick's won, 44-16, over St. Charles; St. Paul's beat Calvert, 16-10, and St. Stephens trounced Immaculate Conception, 46-19. St. Peter's lost to St. Teresa's, 46-10.

In the third section at Gonzaga, St. Joseph's downed St. Aloysius, 35-13. Holy Name beat St. Joseph's Home, 39-21 and St. Martin's defeated St. Francis Xavier, 40-20.

Holy Trinity defeated Our Lady of Victory, 35-19; Blessed Sacrament beat Our Lady of Lourdes, 36-30, St. Thomas defeated St. Ann's, 32-30, and Sacred Heart routed St. Bernadette's 60-8.

The Jewish Community Center yesterday began the second round of basketball games that lead to a four-team interleague playoff. Phillip's Radio, winner of League "A" in the first round, coasted to an easy 50-36 victory over Cardozo in the feature game.

In other "A" League games, Phi Alpha whipped Mitchel's Sport Shop, 42-20; Ornstein defeated Camotops, 59-48; Pill Rollers topped the Ugly AC, 43-33; the Columbia Tigers beat the Dark Horses, 52-40, and Super Service Trash won over the Old Timers, 54-43. In a "B" League game, Ornstein "B" defeated SAK fraternity, 30-22.

8 Senior Bowl Stars Penalized

Conference Cuts Off Scholarships

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP).—Eight football stars from the Southwest conference lost their athletic scholarships because they played in the Senior Bowl game here yesterday, according to General Manager Jimmie Pearre.

Net gate receipts from the contest were divided among the two squads with the winners getting 60 percent and the losers 40.

Pearre said the eight men told him they had been notified by the head of the conference that their grants in aid would be withdrawn if they played in the game. All are seniors and have finished their collegiate grid careers, but their financial assistance in each case was originally to have extended to graduation this spring.

Pearre listed the players as: Doak Walker, Dick McKissick, and Jack Halliday of Southern Methodist University; Ray Borneman and Paul Campbell of Texas; Ruppert Wright and J. D. Ison of Baylor, and Theron Roberts of Arkansas.

In the case of three Southern Methodist players, only one stands a chance of losing anything by playing at Jacksonville.

Senior Bowl Head Says, 'Unbelievable'

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP).—It is hard to believe a college or conference would take away a football player's scholarship after he helped make them thousands of dollars, the Senior Bowl Association president said today.

"We read where the Southwest Conference said it would take action against boys who played in the Senior Bowl," said Charles N. Rolfe, jr., of Nashville. "But it is unbelievable that schools actually will do it."

Mulloy Wins Dixie Tennis

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP).—Gardnar Mulloy had too much power for the veteran Bitsy Grant today and smashed to a straight-set victory in the finals of the Dixie tennis tournament. The score was 6—1, 6—4, 6—2.

Mulloy, ranked No. 3 in the country, was at the top of his game. In the past, Grant has had notable success making the hard-hitting Miamian play Grant's type of slow, steady game. Today Mulloy held to a terrific pace, with forcing shots that rarely let Bitsy get set.

Mulloy, defending the title he won last year, ran through the meet without loss of a set.

Laura Lou Jahn of Clearwater, Fla., won the women's championship, but only after an unexpectedly hard tussle with Martha Barnett of Miami. Miss Jahn scored by 9—7, 1—6, 6—1.

Carmac McGarvey of Brunswick, Ga., took the veterans' title by whipping Jarvis Adams of Venice, 7—5, 6—2.

Mulloy and Sidney Schwartz of Brooklyn captured the men's doubles championship with a 6—3, 7—5 victory over Tony Trabert of Cincinnati and Dr. Arnold Beisser of New Orleans.

Laura Lou Jahn and Martha Barnett had an easy time winning the women's doubles finals from two Rollins college girls, Doris Jensen and Heather Nichols. The score was 6—3, 6—1.

Ben Hogan Has Last Laugh on Photographers

Los Angeles, Jan. 8 (AP).—Ben Hogan and the press photographers had quite a tussle the other day, when Hogan objected to picture-taking as he went around on the opening round of his comeback.

The photographers finally won. Hogan agreed to let them shoot.

Today, as he teed off in a driving rain, he grinned at the already drenched press corps.

"Want to be sure I see you all following me around today," he cracked. "If you don't I'll feel slighted."

Wake Forest Bans Upheld

Wake Forest, N. C., Jan. 8 (AP).—The faculty executive committee has upheld the action of the student council in ousting from the football team six Wake Forest College players accused of cheating in examinations.

Three star players have been expelled from school on charges of cheating on a pre-Christmas chemistry examination.

Three other members of the Deacon grid squad were placed on probation for the same offense.

Out are All-Southern Conference Guard Ray Cicia of Ansonia, Conn.; Tackle Bill George of Morrisville, Pa., who would have been boosted for national honors next season, and George Sniscak, a tackle weighing 235 pounds, of Lansford, Pa. All were juniors.

Put on probation—and therefore ineligible to play football for Wake Forest—were All-Southern Halfback Bill Gregus of Toledo, Ohio; his understudy, Bill Wilhelmy of Ansonia, Conn., and Dick Medlecot, right guard, of Bethlehem, Pa.

Action in all six cases originally was announced at the college's chapel Friday by the student council. The six appealed to the faculty executive committee, which could overrule the council.

However, after a five-hour hearing, the faculty committee announced early today it was upholding the student council.

The three men expelled had been convicted of the same offense before.

Avery Brundage Reelected Olympic Association Head

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The United States Olympic Association yesterday met for the first time since the 1948 London games and reelected Avery Brundage president.

Brundage, presiding at the Willard Hotel meeting, then went about the duties he has performed for more than 20 years.

He appointed the committees to select American teams for the 1951 Pan-American Games in Buenos Aires and the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki.

He reported on last year's International Olympics meeting in Rome and said that the United States had blundered in failing to bring the 1956 games to Detroit.

He said that the American delegates went to Rome to extend the invitation on behalf of Detroit. However, unauthorized invitations also came from Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Chicago and San Francisco.

Hence, the American group divided its votes, and Melbourne, Australia, won the games. He said that from now on, only one invitation will be extended from the United States.

At Brundage's request, the new office of executive director was created, and Lyman J. Bingham of Chicago was elected.

Brundage had said after the London games that he could not continue as president unless an executive directorship was created to assume some of his duties, including public relations and coordinating the raising of funds.

All of last term's officers were reelected, including Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, vice president; Asa S. Bushnell, secretary; Owen V. Van Camp, treasurer, and Charles E. J. Kunz, assistant to the secretary. They'll serve at today's closing session at 9 a. m.

The treasury report showed that $200,000 has already ben raised to help pay expenses for the 1952 games.

A move to eliminate U. S. field hockey participation because of lack of interest was politely argued down by Henry K. Greer, who has headed that team for several years.

The National Skiing Association suggested that the N. C. A. A.'s influence in selecting the U. S. ski team be restricted since only Dartmouth and Colorado, among the colleges, have strong teams.

John T. McGovern, Olympic counselor, reported that private businesses are illegally using the Olympic insignia and motto on merchandise. He said he has applied for a Federal charter for the organization.

The Washingtonians, Eddie LaFond, Joe Bartolini and Edward Rosenblum, were named to the boxing, swimming and ice hockey committees.

Justice Takes Health Job

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Jan. 8. (AP).—Charlie Justice, University of North Carolina All-American football player, has accepted appointment as assistant to the executive director of a medical foundation working to improve health of North Carolinians.

The announcement today made it definite that he will not play pro football for the time being if at all. Nor will he be connected with the athletic department of the university.

Unofficial sources said his salary in the new job with the Medical Foundation of North Carolina will be $8000 a year.

"One of my earliest ambitions was to be a doctor and while, due to war service and football, it is now too late to realize that ambition, this job strikes me as the nearest thing to it," Justice commented.

A prime purpose of the foundation is to raise money for health projects.

Louis' Return in Quest of Title Will Be Biggest Story of 1950, Sports Writers Say

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP).—The biggest sports story of 1950, say a majority of the Nation's sports writers, will be the official return to the ring of Joe Louis in quest of the world's heavyweight boxing crown.

In its set of questions for the annual year-end poll, the Associated Press asked the experts to predict the major sports news of the coming year. In another query, they were asked if they thought Louis would return to the ring officially.

As already disclosed, the writers were certain by a two-to-one margin that the retired heavyweight champ would try a comeback. The vote was 59 to 31.

Then, to back up their opinion, 23 of the 90 who participated in the poll said this would be the year's greatest sports story.

The World Series, "always among the top stories" as one reply said, drew nine votes.

The defeat of Notre Dame in football for the first time in five years was third choice, as expressed by seven writers.

Other potential "biggest" stories, in order:

The success of the new National-American Professional Football League setup; the successful return of Ben Hogan to golf competition; the transfer of the St. Louis Browns to another city, and the pennant races in the major leagues.

There were a few variations of the Joe Louis reply. One writer said the biggest story would be "Louis' defeat by Ezzard Charles." Charles is recognized as heavyweight champ by the National Boxing Association.

Most of the expanded answers, however, expressed the opinion the Brown Bomber would win back the title.

As for Notre Dame, which closed out a fourth straight undefeated season in 1949, one reply, obviously from Dixie, declared stoutly:

"The biggest sports story of '50 will be North Carolina's victory over Notre Dame September 30."

Several of those who believe the new pro football lineup will prove the big story also think it will be interesting to see how the Cleveland Browns fare against top National League opposition. The Browns won four straight titles in the new defunct All-America Conference.

Of the St. Louis Browns, it was predicted they will be shifted (1) to Baltimore; (2) to the West Coast; and (3) to Milwaukee.

Two writers thought Ralph Kiner might surpass Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs for a season. The Pittsburgh clouter banked 54 in 1949.

St. Anthony's Bows, 41-37, To Gonzaga

By Jules Loh

The St. John's Cadets extended their unbeaten string to eight straight by thumping DeMatha, 53-32, in the first game of a Catholic High league double-header yesterday at the Catholic U. gym.

Gonzaga got past St. Anthony's, 41-37, in the second game.

The Cadets used nine men, all of whom scored, in winning their second game of the Catholic high crown.

Bob MacDonald and Jack Daly paced the Johnies with 10 each, and Bobby McLindon contributed nine.

Dematha, upset conqueror of Gonzaga Friday night, was never in the contest as St. John's led all the way. Fred Richardson was high for the losers, and the game, with 11.

Gonzaga needed all the breaks to avert its second straight loss in league play. St. Anthony's, 66-30 losers to St. John's Friday kept the game close until late in the third period. Then, with the count knotted at 24 all, Gerry LeCompte scored eight points, and Gonzaga was ahead to stay.

Never more than six points separated the two as the lead was tied five times and changed hands six.

Mike Nolan, Gonzaga's big center, and St. Anthony's little guard, Lou Pennini, split scoring honors for the game with 13. LeCompte was second high for the Eagles with 10.

Six Players Penalized

Doak Walker, of course, already had turned professional and had received an automobile, money for writing his life's story for a Dallas newspaper and other financial returns, before going to the game.

Dick McKissack, SMU fullback, graduates at mid-term. Jack Halliday, SMU guard, forfeits tuition of $300 and $65 per month for board, room and laundry by playing in the game. Since he received only $343 for his participation at Jacksonville, he ended up in the hole. His board, room and laundry money would have run four months, making a total of $250. Added to the $250 tuition he gives up $550, so he ends up with a deficit of $207.

But Dr. H. D. Mouzon, Southern Methodist's conference faculty committe member, pointed out that all the boys figured on getting other financial benefits from turning pro at this time anyway. "They all are figuring on signing professional contracts," he pointed out.

Each member of the winning Rebel squad got $475, and each player of the losing Yankees $343 for playing in the game.

Pearre said the men had completed their college athletic carreers. He said no man was invited to the Senior Bowl who played in any other sport. He said they wanted to play in the game badly enough to forego their grants-in-aid.

"They all got their checks last night, and they all appeared to be perfectly happy," Pearre added.

Jockey Club May Act on Accrued Funds, Date Conflicts Today

Baltimore, Jan. 8 (AP).—The first meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club directors since Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt sold 38 percent fo his stock will be held tomorrow afternoon at Pimlico.

Vanderbilt sold his stock last October to a syndicate of 16. He retained 13 percent. The jockey club owns three Maryland tracks, Pimlico, Laurel and Timonium.

Tomorrow's meeting will be the first opportunity for any change in management, if there's to be any. Harry A. Parr 3d, a member of the syndicate, now is president.

A jockey club spokesman said there was no agenda for the meeting. But two important topics could very well come up.

First, the jockey club must decide this year whether to spend about half a million dollars on improvements or forfeit the money to the State.

The money has accumulated since 1944 at the rate of ½ of 1 percent on all money bet at Pimlico. All tracks in the State are taxed the same, but Pimlico is the only one that hasn't drawn on its funds.

Generally, the money must be spent within three years of collection or revert to the State. However, because of the war the tracks were given until December 31 of this year to spend the money collected in 1944, 1945 and 1946.

The jockey club has delayed expenditures at Pimlico, attempting instead to close the track at Baltimore and consolidate it with Laurel. A bill authorizing such a move was vetoed by Governor Lane last year.

The jockey club, therefore, must decide this year to use the money or lose it. Or to try again for a move to Laurel to spend it there. The latter is not likely, a club spokesman said, since next month's meeting of the Legislature is primarily for passage of an annual budget and relating fiscal matters.

Besides deciding what to do with its improvement fund for Pimlico, the jockey club is likely tomorrow to propose a change in the present dates for 1950 racing.

Since adoption of the dates for Maryland, the New Jersey tracks announced a schedule that operates the same time as Havre de Grace, Pimlico and Laurel.

Havre de Grace officials already have announced they will seek a change to avoid conflict with New Jersey. The jockey club is expected to feel the same way.

The racing commission will meet January 17 to consider any such proposals by the tracks.

Bill Bennings . . .

Dick Lawless, leading apprentice at Bowie and Charles Town, is now at Tropical Park. The youngster who proved almost unbeatable around Maryland's minor tracks last summer may be leased by G. Palmer Sowers, his contract employer, to Bowes Bond for the remainder of the Florida season. Lawless, little blond-headed lad who looks like movie material, rode his first winner at Charles Town July 11 and finished the year with 111 winners, a remarkable record considering he had only six months of action. It had been expected that Lawless would ride at Sunshine (Tampa) Park, opening January 13, but Sowers, who has guided the youth's career thus far, believes the youngster deserves a full try at the bigtime right now. He did well at Bowie. Maybe he is ready.—Bill.

Basic Commodity Output Of World Little Above 1928

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 8 (U.P.). Current world production of basic commodities shows little increase over the 1928 rate, and figures have dipped below 1928 levels in some cases, a mammoth United Nations statistical survey revealed tonight.

However, it is noted in a summary of the survey that "there has been a steady growth in the production of most basic foods, materials and commodities throughout the world since the end of World War II."

While the over-all picture shows that current production does not substantially top 1928 predepression figures, oil is cited as one important commodity that has bucked the general trend, rising more than 150 percent in the past 20 years.

And, not surprisingly, there have been sharp raises in such new industries as rayon and aluminum.

Below 1928 Output

Production tables show that 1947 production of wheat, rice, oats and potatoes was quite a bit below 1928 output and—except in the case of wheat—below 1937 production.

On the other hand, 1948 production of cotton and wool exceeded the 1928 figures.

Facts and figures on economic and social topics have been gathered, the summary points out, "from 239 countries, nearly the whole of the world." The United States, represented in 149 of the 158 statistical tables, has the highest coverage, while at the other end of the scale are Andorra and Bhutan, which creep into only a single statistical series.

First Survey Since 1945

Here are some of the other top gleanings of the survey, the first to appear since 1945, when the now-defunct League of Nations published its final statistical yearbook:

1. Production of steel shows a moderate rise from 106 million tons in 1928 to 136 million tons in 1948.

2. The biggest steel increase has been in the United States, with a 1948 figure of 80 million tons compared with 52 million tons for 1928. The rise brought the United States share in total world production from 50 percent in 1928 to 59 percent in 1948.

3. The volume of exports from the United States and Canada almost doubled between 1928 and 1948. Britain, Australia and New Zealand also showed significant jumps, but for many countries trade has not returned to the prewar level.

4. Newsprint consumption is highest in the United States, both in total and per capita volume. Britain ranks second in total consumption, while Canada is second in per capita consumption. The United States has the largest number of daily newspapers, 1781, with a total circulation of 52,300,000. Russia ranks second in circulation with 31 million, and Britain is third with 29,720,000.

cause, as the rain came down, their scores went up.

Hogan was four strokes over par, and so was Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill.

Sam Snead was six blows over par when he pulled up at the fifteenth to await the committee's decision.

Hardest hit but philosophical was little Jerry Barber, the pacesetting leader. He waded around in a creditable two over par 73 and held a firm grip on first place with a 54-hole total of 210.

The Pasadena pro merely said he'd be on deck and replay the round.

This is the first time the tournament has been interrupted by bad weather. It was all but washed away in 1930 when Denny Shute won at this same club. Lawson Little proved a good mudder in winning in the rain in 1940.

Little is on hand for this year's proceedings, too. And to demonstrate that he hasn't lost his finesse under flood conditions, he turned in today's best score—a 71.

Just last year snow—real snow—fell during one of the rounds.

When play resumes, Barber will again be on top with a 36-hole score of 69-68—137. Two strokes back will be Ramson, and tied at 142 will be Hogan and Ellsworth Vines.

Grouped at 143: Otto Greiner of Baltimore, who was four shots over par when the end came today; Eric Monti of Los Angeles; Bob Gajda, Detroit; Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich., and Snead.

curtailed production program which has resulted in an acute coal shortage in some areas and which shortly will seriously affect the entire Nation." He added:

"This is a situation I anticipated when I induced our Banking Committee last summer to investigate the special privileges now enjoyed by certain labor groups which apparently were affecting production and prices.

"The effect is no longer in doubt and witnesses testifying under oath before our committee placed all responsibility on orders issued by John L. Lewis to members of his miners' union."

At the time of the committee's investigation, Lewis had the miners on a three-day week. Later a full strike was called, then, Lewis again put the short week into effect.

Robertson said that at the Tuesday meeting of the Banking Committee he would recommend that the group submit to the Judiciary Committee, which would have jurisdiction, "an appropriate amendment to the antitrust laws."

He added that the amendment would "place labor unions on a par with corporations with respect to actions in restraint of trade when the monopolistic action is not reasonably related to wages, hours, health or safety of employes."

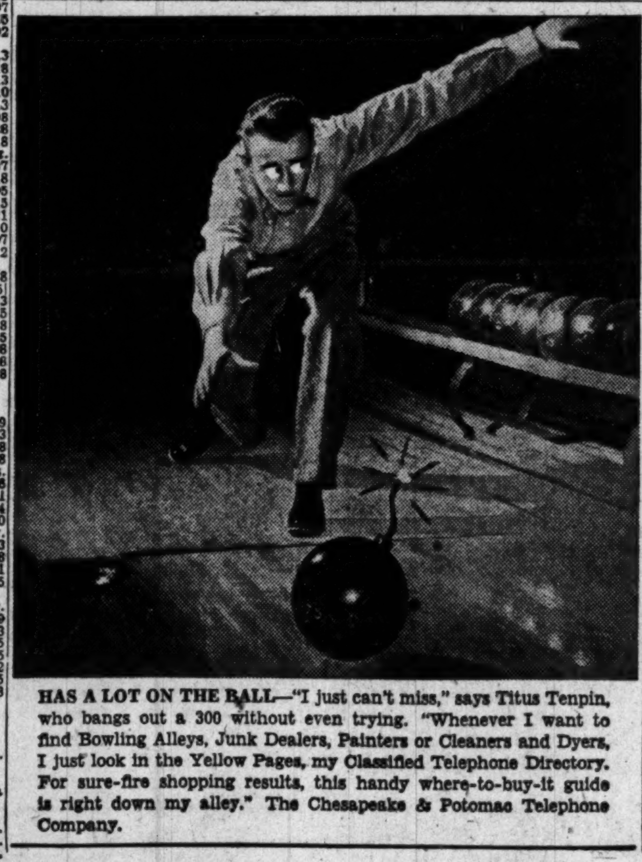

Mayhem Charge Holds Man in Ear-Biting Case

Vincent Suber, 36, of 1319 S st. nw., had his ear back on his head yesterday, thanks to a stitching job at Freedmen's Hospital. And Howard Johnson, 26, 1515 Swann st. nw., who allegedly bit it off, is under $1500 bond on a charge of mayhem.

Police said the two got into an argument and then a fight Saturday in a restaurant in the 1800 block of 14th st. nw. Johnson said Suber hit him twice on the head, then cut him with a penknife. So, he insisted, in self defense, he bit the ear. Suber picked it up and took it to the hospital for repairs.

Johnson surrendered voluntarily to police. He is to appear today in Municipal Court.

before a general election is held is to ask the King for the dissolution of Parliament. This may have been done during Attlee's visit at Sandringham, but official sources declined to confirm it. Parliament now is in recess until January 24.

The independent Sunday Express said:

"The Household Cavalry—who escort the King on ceremonial occasions—have not yet been told they will be required for the state opening of Parliament on January 24.

"Normally, they would have been briefed for the occasion before now.

"What does this suggest?

"It may mean that the state opening will not take place; that Mr. Attlee has decided on disolution and that he will announce the election date within the next few days."

10 Albanians Face Trial

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 8 (AP). Yugoslavia tonight ordered the trial of 10 Albanians accused of spying and sabotage for the Russian-led Cominform.

The trial will open Monday in Skoplje, capital of the Yugoslav republic of Macedonia and long a brewing spot of European conflicts.

The accusations were disclosed by Borba, official newspaper of Marshal Tito's Communist Party.

They are a result of the feud between Albania and Yugoslavia that followed denunciation of Tito's regime by the Cominform on charges of pursuing "nationalistic" policies. Albania sided with the Cominform.

3 D. C. Men Win in Bridge Tournament

The most successful tourney in the 15-year history of the Northern Virginia championship bridge competitions wound up yesterday with a five-man team sweeping to victory in open team-of-four play.

A team consisting of Leroy Thurtell, Ralph Spritzer and Fred Karpin, all of Washington, and R. L. Miles of Virginia Beach and Al Sobel of New York City bested 19 other table quartets in the climax event. Rules allow for a spare player in this event.

Winners in the open-pair event which was concluded at 1 a. m. yesterday were D. J. Harris of Arlington and D. S. Goalwin of Falls Church.

More than 200 players from five States and the District participated at the Hotel Roosevelt, tourney manager James Stone said in describing it as the "best to date."

Juilliard '4' Gives Lively Performance

By Richard Keith

The Juilliard String Quartet, making one of its several Washington appearances this season, played a concert of chamber music yesterday afternoon at the Phillips Gallery.

In addition to two compositions by Schubert, these intrepid young musicians offered the rarely heard Third Quartet by Arnold Schoenberg, whose controversial works are widely discussed today but seldom performed.

Many of Schoenberg's detractors rant and rave at his works without ever having accepted his simple basic aims—to treat consonance as dissonance and to avoid any feeling of tonality. Once the intelligent listener cuts his moorings from the tradition-bound concepts of consonance and tonality, he cannot fail to be carried along by the fascinating melodic currents and rhythmic eddies of such a piece as the Third Quartet.

The notoriously unpopular reputation of Schoenberg's atonal compositions and their difficult performance problems prevent them from being heard frequently.

For this reason we owe a debt of gratitude to the Juilliard Quartet for yesterday's well-studied and lively performances, and to the Phillips Gallery for presenting it. If we never hear these famous works, how are we ever to evaluate them.

The Original Don Cossack Chorus, which appeared yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall, gave its popular and ever-the-same concert. Except that they look and sound older than last year, they are about the same. The beautiful resonance, cellar basses and attic falsettos, tender pianissimos, shouting, kicking, whistling, and their cocky little director, Serge Jaroff, all are still the features of the show.

The audience was large and enthusiastic.

blaze was not immediately determined, but noted that it started in the rear of the building near several containers filled with soiled, oil-stained clothing and rags which had been returned for cleaning.

The loss, according to Finisecy, is fully covered by insurance.

Fireman Is Injured Fighting Park Pl. Blaze

A fireman suffered cuts on two fingers fighting a blaze Saturday night in the home of Stephen Paschall at 3302 Park pl. nw. He was treated at Emergency Hospital, released, and returned to duty yesterday. Firemen said the blaze, of undetermined origin, started in a hallway and went up through a staircase. The injured fireman was Sergt. Pearson Talbott, 47, 1209 Clifton st. nw., attached to Engine Company 24.

Holober to Stand Trial Today in Wife, Baby Slaying

Charles Francis Holober will go on trial in Fairfax County Circuit Court today for the slaying of his wife and child.

Scheduled December 13, the trial was postponed by Judge Paul Brown because of the illness of a witness, Dr. Francis S. Chance, one of the psychiatrists who judged Holober sane.

Holober, 40, a former jewelry clerk who lived at 1216 Shepherd st. nw., confessed to police that he shot his estranged wife, Francis, and buried her and their baby daughter, Joan, who was still alive, near a Fairfax County nudist camp last February 26.

Luckily, his other eye has not been affected, doctors say

West German Purge May Get Max Reimann

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—The West German Communist Party, whipped in the last election and split by Titoism, today was in the midst of a purge which may end with the dismissal of veteran leader Max Reimann.

Almost two dozen district and state party leaders have been ousted and several others reprimanded for "lack of vigilance" since the purge began in November.

Kurt Buehler, a party official in the Stuttgart area, committed suicide Christmas Day. Just one month after he was kicked out of the party.

Hugo Paul, state party chairman in the Ruhr and one of the 15 Communist deputies in the West German Parliament, was similarly relieved of all party duties in December.

Just before that, Walter Fisch, party director of education, was dismissed for belittling the danger of Titoism and allowing the free discussion of settled party policy in party newspapers.

Observers said Reimann appeared on his way out of the party hierarchy last month when the party central committee handed him the party's youth movement. They said that may have been the first reduction in rank for the former coalminer.

Reimann has been in trouble with the party every since his son fled from the Russian zone of Germany last year and denounced the Russians and the Communists.

First to be expelled in the purge was Josef Wilhelm, former chief editor of the Schleswig-Holstein Communist paper Norddeutsche Echo.

Today, Weiss predicted that a number of party members were still to be dismissed for opposing the party line.

U. of Maryland Forms Retailers Advisory Council

A new liaison between retailers in the State and the College of Business and Public Administration of the University of Maryland was announced yesterday by Dr. J. Freeman Pyle, dean of the college.

A council of retail executives from Baltimore and other parts of the State has been formed to advise the college faculty on personnel requirements, and also on types of training and research activities needed by the merchandising firms.

Approximately 25 members will serve on the council. More than half are from large establishments in Baltimore, but others represent State-wide retail organizations and also many of the smaller cities in the State.

One on the Aisle—

That Englishman From Zanesville

By Richard L. Coe

WATCHING THE AMUSING Bob Hope at Warner's as a guy from North Zanesville, Ohio, in "The Great Lover," it's hard to realize he began life as an Englishman, Leslie Townes Hope.

For Leslie, to be familiar, is as American a type as you can imagine. That's been the secret of his success, crowned lately by his succession to his pal Bing Crosby's old throne, Box Office Star No. One.

Hope behaves the way most of us think we might in similar scrapes. His gags have that impudence that is one of our national traits. Taking fullest advantage of the screen, he uses his eyes the way we all do mentally but hardly dare to in actuality. No collar-ad type, he contrives to get the girl.

In this latest adventure he's been charge to some Boy Foresters for a European cycle tour. Traveling home on a posh French liner, he falls in with an impoverished grand duke, his beautiful daughter and a suave card shark, to whom murder is as familiar a chore as pocketing a deuce.

In short, it's a typical Bob Hope role and he harks back to the Cleveland days he began to know when his family moved to this country when he was four. He proudly spoofs Zanesville and he has no use whatever for the highly moral Boy Foresters he's supposed to be shepherding.

So though you find him going through some routines you've seen him do before—you enjoy them because at his particular style no one is more adept. Since most of the action takes place on the giant liner, there's the scampering about on shipboard that's such reliable movie fun. Bob can give a stowaway some ideas and he could also make Harold Lloyd smile at this latest version of his old tricks.

"THE GREAT LOVER." Paramount release produced by Edmund Beloin. Screen play by Beloin, Melville Shavelson and Jack Rose. Songs by Jay Livingston and Ray Evans. Background music by Joseph J. Lilley. Photographed by Charles R. Lang, jr. Directed by Alexander Hall. At the Warner.

Integrity of Style

In recent weeks the Warner has given us several popular comedians, whose styles are worth contrasting. Last week Danny Kaye was showing us, in "The Inspector General," now at the Metropolitan (plug!), how his fey quality can register. Kaye is incomparably a far finer artist than Hope, yet, though his world repute is more impressive, his popularity here in his own country seems to be with an especial audience.

Before that, the Warner gave us Milton Berle in "Always Leave Them Laughing." The television star's vehicle wasn't so neatly tailored as Kaye's or Hope's, not through any fault of the writers, but through a weakness of Berle's own. He has been unable to find that integrity of self that has been the essence of both Kaye and Hope. In Berle's picture, you noted him timing tricks and bits of style that Hope has made his own; in the copy they don't quite jell.

"The Great Lover" gives Hope a chance at a song, with Rhonda Fleming, "Lucky Us," by no means as fresh a song as the same Jay Livingston's "Buttons and Bows." Still, the song's there and so's that scene where he's carried away with his leading lady's singing.

Miss Fleming is decorative as always and Roland Young is suavely on hand to play a more disagreeable character, if you will pardon the understatement, than his former dimwits. Roland Culver is the grand duke and Richard Lyon and Gary Gray are the most important of the youngsters.

You'll also get an amusing scene, unbilled, with one J. Benny. Yes, the picture's good fun.

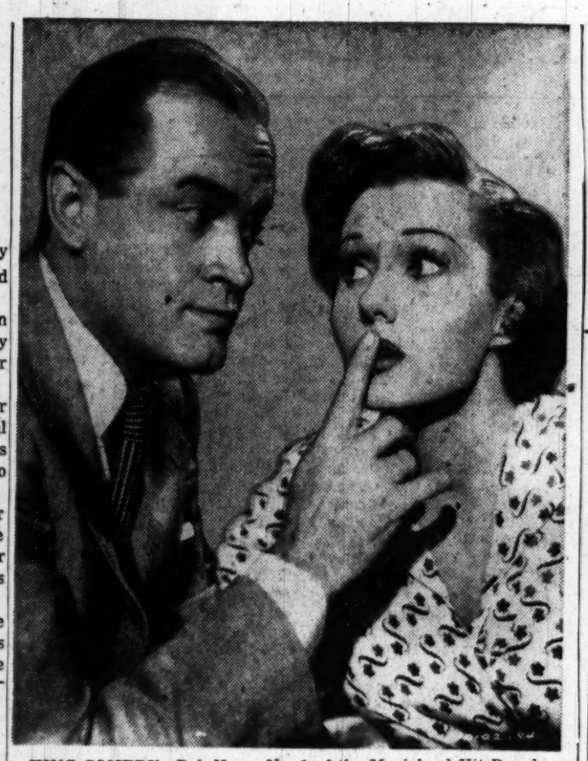

Back to the '30's

Curious indeed is the Warner's top short, titled "Calling All Girls." This purports to be a new picture though you're surprised to find the no-longer-familiar title of Busby Berkeley as "dance director."

It turns out, however, that "Calling All Girls" is a meaty clip of those old musical movie spectacles dug up from the storage vaults, "Wonderbar," "The Golddiggers" and "Shanghai Lil."

And what a collection that is! Talk about Bikini bathing suits. Literally hordes and hordes of girls, girls, girls and some boys, boys, boys dance, dance, dance in the most awesome patterns ever divised by man.

I'd quite forgotten how virtually incredible Busby's old dance routines were till seeing this one. Saturday night I was probably the only one in the crowded Warner who thought them insanely funny, but maybe I was laughing so hard all I heard was the decided applause at the Ruby Keeler-Jimmy Cagney finals. The voice which describes "By a Waterfall" as "the most splendid, inspiring musical number ever filmed" may be loose with his meanings, but it certainly has something.

The Federal Diary

More Benefits Studied For Federal Workers In Hazardous Jobs

Two studies are under way that could easily result in additional benefits for Federal workers doing hazardous work.

The Civil Service Commission, by direction of Congress, is working up a plan to pay salary differentials to people in dangerous work.

In addition, the commission is looking into the possibility of earlier retirement of many employes in hazardous jobs.

The Congress two years ago opened the door to earlier retirement for these people when it passed a special law to allow FBI agents to retire on a full annuity at 50 after 20 years of service. Some months later it was expanded to cover all employes who investigate and guard Federal criminals.

Employes in equally dangerous work are demanding similar retirement benefits such as test pilots, scientists whose lives are endangered by their work, ammunition handlers, etc.

The retirement and pay studies will be made separately. However, top personnel officials felt that the picture would be incomplete if only the pay survey was made.

TOP PAY: It will be another month before the "elite 400" in Government are announced. The Civil Service Commission has been unable to agree on the 400 jobs it will recommend be placed in the three new top grades.

The law gives the President the final authority to name the 25 jobs to be allocated GS-18, or $14,000 a year. However, the White House staff will look over Civil Service's recommendations for 300 jobs in GS-16 ($11,200 to $12,000)and 75 jobs in GS-17 $12,200 to $13,000).

There's a real possibility that the entire 400 jobs won't be filled. Between them, the agencies recommended about 1000 people for the jobs. The President is a sure bet to ask Congress to remove the 400 restriction.

LAY-OFF: Civil Service has again amended its lay-off regulations. It formerly required agencies to transfer its laid-off status employes with five or more years of service and with satisfactory efficiency ratings to similar jobs held by nonstatus employes in the commuting area. The transfers were mandatory.

Under the new rule, transfers can be made when they are "desirable." The job retention rights of veterans are not affected by the change.

JOB NEWS: Federal hiring during October was the lowest since before the war. The Nation-wide hiring rate was 13 for each 1000 employes on the rolls. Employe turnover was at a postwar low . . . More than 8500 persons have applied for the translator exam to be given here Saturday. Only a few jobs will be filled from the exam . . . The 2900 applicants for the geologist exam will be given a written test on January 19 . . . More than 225 persons passed the recent test for patent examiner . . . The agricultural education officer test ($3825 to $6400) will close on January 17 . . . An exam for hydrotherapist ($2875 a year) to fill openings at St. Elizabeths Hospital here is open.

At nearby Fort Belvoir, Va., Civil Service exams are open for these jobs: Engineering draftsman and sound and projection training instructor, $2200 to $3825; auto mechanic, $1.11 to $1.75 an hour; ordnance vehicle inspector, $1.32 to $1.62; carpenter $1.54 to $1.88; plumber, $1.47 to $1.79; head dishwasher, $1.04 to $1.27, and air conditioning mechanic, $1.47 to $1.79 . . . The Federal Security Agency in Atlanta will accept applications until January 20 for: Medical bacteriologist, biologist, chemist, entomologist, mycologist, parasitologist, and serologist, $3825 to $6400 to start.

Vote Control Threat Denied In Home Rule

Kefauver Says Bill Has Nothing to Do With Segregation

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday that passage of his home-rule bill for the District would not mean that unscrupulous politicians could use the "Negro vote" here for their own purposes.

"I get awfully tired of this business of dividing Americans into groups, classes, creeds and so forth," he declared in a radio interview. "The Negroes here are not going to vote as a bloc, or be controlled, any more than in other cities with large colored populations."

The question was brought up by Carl L. Shipley, legislative counsel for the National Federation of Young Republicans, who was interviewing Senator Kefauver on WQQW. Shipley said some opponents of home rule use this as an argument against it.

Better Educated

Senator Kefauver added that vote manipulation has never occurred in cities like Baltimore and Richmond, which have larger Negro populations than Washington's 28 percent. Futhermore, he said, the Negroes here are generally better educated than in those cities.

Shipley, who is also general counsel for the D. C. Young Republicans, also said some home-rule opponents argue that the racial segregation pattern here would be broken down by the Kefauver bill, which provides for local suffrage and self-government.

"This has nothing to do with segregation, one way or the other," declared Kefauver. "It would give the people themselves the right to decide what they want to do about segregation."

12 Departments

Earlier, the Senator explained that his bill would set up a city government of 11 city council members who would elect a chairman and a city manager. There would be 12 departments in the government instead of the present arrangement of "120-odd crazy-quilt bureaus, agencies and so forth, the most uneconomical of any city I know," Kefauver said.

He said he thought it was a great "indictment of Congress, and also of the people," that home rule has not been urged more strongly in the 76 years Washington has been without it.

The Kefauver bill was passed by the Senate ast May and is now tabled in the House District Committee.

Acalotti, Lewis Lottery Charges Ready for Trial

Lottery charges against William "Snags" Lewis, Attilio Acalotti and Frank Billeci will be tried today in District Court, beginning at 10 a. m. The trial judge will be named this morning.

Before the trial begins, a motion of Bernice Franklin to quash the subpena ordering her to testify will be heard. Her testimony helped convict Acalotti of threatening a witness.

Billeci's request for a separate trial, on the grounds trial with his codefendants prejudices his case, will also be heard, as will another motion by Billeci's attorney asking that U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay be made to reveal any evidence obtained by wiretapping.

This will be Lewis' second gambling trial. Last October, a District Court jury was unable to agree whether he and 13 others were guilty of lottery and conspiracy charges.

Capitol Heights Church Cornerstone Is Laid

The cornerstone of the $50,000 St. Andrew's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Capitol Heights, Md., was laid yesterday.

Speaker was the Rev. Manfred Manrodt, pastor of Friedens Lutheran Church, Baltimore, and father of the Rev. Paul Manrodt, pastor of St. Andrew's.

Bank Teller, Groom-to-Be, Held on Embezzlement Charge

A 25-year-old Upper Marlboro, Md., bank teller, who allegedly embezzled $531 of bank funds to pay for a honeymoon, was in a Charleston, S. C., jail yesterday instead of on his wedding trip.

Special Agent Ed Mason, in charge of the Savannah, Ga., FBI office, identified the bank clerk as Lawrence A. Wood, formerly of the Franklin Park Hotel, 1332 I st. nw.

The FBI agent said the $531, missing from the Andrews Air Force Base branch of the First National Bank of Southern Maryland, has been recovered.

Wood was arrested Saturday morning outside the home of his fiance's parents, near Charleston, according to one report. Yesterday was to have been his wedding day.

Instead Wood was held Saturday in default of $3000 bond after a hearing before a United States Commissioner.

A clerk at the Franklin Park Hotel said Wood left the hotel on Christmas, paying a $29 bill with a check that bounced. The clerk described Wood as a "nice, easy-going guy everybody liked."

3 'Loaded' Itinerant Laborers Held in Alexandria Robbery

Three itinerant laborers who, Alexandria police said, were "loaded" both inside and out, were held yesterday for investigation of the burglary of an Alexandria market.

The three men were arrested shortly before noon by Corpl. Thomas McGowan as they wobbled along a railroad track south of Alexandria's Union Station, about five hours after the burglary had been reported. Externally they were laden with loot from the store, McGowan said, while internally they had taken on a cargo of something that smelled like canned heat.

A case of canned heat, McGowan noted, was among items reported stolen from the Gateway Market, 701 S. Patrick st. Half of the case was included in loot carried by the trio, while another half-case of empties was found in a "hobo jungle" a short distance from where the three were arrested.

Other items missing from the store included about six packages of cigarettes quantities of tobacco, candy, chewing gum, canned sardines and a half-gallon of wine. Most of the loot was recovered with the men's arrest.

The men, all booked for investigation pending further questioning, were listed by police as Thomas Newkirk, 24, of Warsaw, N. C.; Clarence McKinnon, 48, Lakeland, Fla., and William Jones, 42, of no fixed address. All denied breaking into the store, police said.

Robbery Attempt Frustrated, Man Dives Through Glass Door

George Becton, 39, of 604 15th st. ne., will go to Municipal Court today on charges of attempted robbery and destruction of property following what police said was a dive through a plate glass door from which he emerged uncut.

Charles Gelb, 45, owner of a butcher shop at 614 Tennessee st. nw., and his son-in-law, Abe Wool, 23, were in the place at closing time Saturday, they told police, when a man they knew as "George," entered. First he asked for boloney, then demanded the money in the shop.

Wool tussled with him, he said, and was thrown to the floor. Gelb then menaced him with a butcher knife, while Wool picked himself up and started to telephone police.

The man then dived through the plate glass door. A radio call brought 10 policemen to the scene, including Inspector Robert Bryant and Capt. Robert Murray of the Detective Bureau, and Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, of the robbery squad. They arrested Becton. He was freed on $1300 bond on the two charges.

Commission To Start D. C. Budget Push

$119 Million Total To Be Presented to House Subcommittee

Washington's Commissioners will catch up with their budget at the Capitol today and begin selling the 119-million-dollar program to a House subcommittee.

The budget plan, covering the 1951 fiscal year that starts July 1, will reach the Capitol as part of the President's budget message.

The Commissioners with their fiscal aides will appear as first witnesses in a District budget hearing set for 2 p. m.

Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), chairman of the House District appropriations subcommittee, ordered the immediate start of work on the new budget as part of the drive mapped by Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), to handle all appropriations in a "single package" bill.

The District bill is to be one chapter in the general appropriation bill covering Federal operations.

Today's hearing will be closed to the public, but a public hearing session on the budget, probably next week, is slated before Bates' group completes its work.

After the Commissioners and their budget officials present the main outlines of the budget plan, officials of District agencies will be called in later executive sessions to discuss details of their budgeted programs.

Under the schedule set by Cannon, District budget hearings are to end by January 20, and the necessary legislation written by the end of this month.

Gayety Theater Thief Gets Jewelry, Bull Whip

Thieves visited a dressing room at the Gayety Theater, police were told yesterday, and took rings, jewelry and a makeup box valued at a total of $115.

Nathan Jocko, stage manager, said the theft took place Saturday while the jewelry owners, Gloria Galla and Marcelle Poane, chorus girls, were on the stage. Also taken was a black leather bull-whip, property of the theater.

Protestant Unity Plan Is Outlined

Dr. E. S. Jones Says Federal Union Of Churches Can Be Set in 10 Years

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Federal union of America's Protestant churches is possible within 10 years, the Rev. Dr. E. Stanley Jones declared yesterday.

Dr. Jones proposed a federal union of churches which would be governed by an assembly composed of representatives of all denominations. Each denomination would exist as a self-governing branch of the larger church to which all would belong.

A veteran missionary and evangelist, he spoke at Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw.

An overflow congregation, which included Methodist Bishops Charles W. Flint, Wilbur E. Hammaker, and James H. Straughn and House Chaplain Dr. James S. Montgomery, heard the sermon.

Christians today are beginning to feel a sense of solidarity, Dr. Jones said in calling for federal union of churches.

Self-Expression

Such a plan, he said, would mean a union of the diverse Protestant denominations, but would permit self-expression for all groups.

"I believe we can get together and get together now," Dr. Jones declared. He expressed the belief that 99 percent of the people in the churches are in favor of church union.

Growing sentiment favoring church union was one of four "great hopeful movements of our time" discussed by the Methodist missionary in the sermon.

Other Movements

In addition, he cited:

1. The peoples of the world are beginning to think in terms of world government as a means of achieving collective security for all.

2. Growth of the world missionary movement.

3. The 15-month, Nation-wide evangelistic program now under way in the United States under the sponsorship of 38 Protestant denominations.

The missionary, who visited the Far East on a preaching mission last year, urged a vigorous effort to Christianize Japan.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Japanese officials believe that Japan will never become a democracy unless it becomes a Christian nation, he said.

If the Japanese become Christians, Dr. Jones said, they will become the "natural evangelists of the East."

Professor Finds

Anonymity Rare Factor In U. S. Life

The Washington Post
JOHN G. ALLEE, Jr.
. . . You'd be surprised

Library of Congress Holds Many Clews To Most of People

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Anonymity? There is no such animal.

John G. Allee, jr., will be the first to tell you that. Give him a name and a home town and he can go to the Library of Congress and find out a lot about you . . . you'd be surprised.

And, says Allee, anybody else can too, if he knows how to use research techniques. Here's a sample.

He starts off with, say, John Jones, Podunk, Iowa. He goes to the Podunk, Iowa, city directory. From that he learns Jones' occupation and his street address. If Jones is a merchant, he probably has an advertisement in the directory. Allee can tell from the ad whether Jones is a "flashy operator" type of merchant, or a dignified, restrained type.

Next, he goes to the files of the Podunk newspaper. He reads until he gets more biographical data on Jones—a social note, for instance, which calls him a graduate of the State university.

He gets the university annuals down from the library shelves. Jones was a fraternity man and a football player. He gets his age. He looks up in the fraternity's publication and gets a chatty piece about Jones, more information. "Most of these journals," says Allee, "are wordy."

Allee now has a pretty good picture of Jones. Next he goes to the fire-insurance plat mats, gets a physical description of Jones' home, its layout, room by room.

And so on, ad infinitum.

Allee, a 30-year-old George Washington University English professor, says his experiments with this type of research have convinced him of one thing:

"Americans are definitely the most publicity-minded people on the face of the earth. In another country, there may be such a thing as anonymity—it might be possible to "lose" yourself, but not here.

"But if you publish that," he said, "it may make some people mad. Because I do think a lot of people think they are anonymous."

Allee, who lives at 830 Buchanan st., ne., recommended a trip to the Congressional Library as a revealing experience.

"You can see experts at research looking people up to find out whether they should go on 'sucker lists'," he said. "The thing is, nearly everybody does at least one thing in his life—he either becomes an elder or an alderman at one time or another, and then he loses his anonymity."

Alexandria Police Hold Man in Death Of Woman

Admits Victim Attended Party In His Quarters Before She Died

Alexandria police are holding a 62-year-old handyman for investigation in the mysterious death of Mrs. Edith Dix, 31, found nude and dying in a Queen st. building December 30.

The man, Carl Blackwell, no fixed address, was arrested in Richmond, Va., Friday night after police learned he had lived in the building at 214½ Queen st. until a day before Mrs. Dix's death, according to Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes.

Mrs. Dix, a divorcee from Winchester, Va., died at Alexandria Hospital the day after she was found lying on a cot in the building, bleeding and unconscious. Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner, said death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage, resulting from either a "blow or a fall."

Arrested Week Earlier

Hawes said Mrs. Dix had been arrested for drunkenness about a week before her death, and at that time had a black eye and showed other evidence of having been beaten. However, Dr. Sims said it was impossible to determine if the hemorrhage was induced by the earlier beating or a subsequent blow.

The woman also was in the "first stages" of pneumonia at the time of her death, the coroner reported.

Blackwell, who has been booked for investigation, has admitted Mrs. Dix attended a drinking party at his quarters the night before she was found there, Hawes stated. He said she "passed out" on the cot before the other guests left.

Later, he told police, he tried unsuccessfully to revive her, then became frightened and fled the city. He denied striking her at any time, and disclaimed any knowledge of how she might have been injured, Hawes said.

"Minor Assault"

At the time of Mrs. Dix's arrest, police paid little attention to the fact that she apparently had been beaten because she made no complaint and the beating appeared to constitute a "minor assault," according to Hawes.

The detective chief described Blackwell as an "odd jobber" who has worked around Alexandria for several years.

Hawes said he understood Blackwell had been given permission to stay at the Queen st. address while he was remodeling it for eventual use as a fish market.

Opposition Noted to Its Recommendations

Tax Study Group's Report to Serve as Future Guide

By Benjamin Muse

(This is another in a series of articles on major issues to be considered by the Virginia General Assembly which opens its biennial session in Richmond Wednesday.)

The outstanding document before the Virginia General Assembly, when it meets in Richmond, Wednesday, will be the monumental report of the Commission on State and Local Revenues and Expenditures, better known as the Tax Study Commission.

Some of the commission's 52 recommendations will meet opposition, and it is doubtful if a very large part of its program will find its way through the General Assembly's crowded agenda to enactment at the coming session. But the report will serve many legislators as a handbook and a guide to sound progress in a wide field of governmental policy for many months to come.

The report is dominated by the desire of the 21-member Tax Study Commission, headed by State Senator Garland Gray, to strengthen and modernize local government, particularly county government, in Virginia. The commission was emphatically the county's friend. But it would have the State take the role of a stern father in insisting that the county follow businesslike accounting and fiscal procedure, and it would emphasize the county's responsibility for meeting its growing financial needs.

County boards of supervisors were especially favored in the commission's plan. It would give them the power to appoint county school and welfare boards—and, possibly eventually, county health officers. It would authorize county boards of supervisors to employ executive secretaries—a step in the direction of the county manager form of government.

Periodic Reassessment

On the other hand, the Gray commission would have the State take a strong hand in seeing that property in the counties is properly assessed for taxation, and objections already raised by commissioners of revenue suggest that the recommendations on this point will not be easy for the counties to take.

The report called for mandatory reassessment of property every four years—with State "assistance." This means that the State would see to it that the appraisals are made, and made with the aid of expert appraisers supplied by the State Department of Taxation.

Appraisals have been made in this manner by voluntary arrangement in recent years in various counties, including Prince William. The result is inevitably painful to some property owners, but it irons out many inequalities and tends to increase the total valuation of taxable property. Something unquestionably needs to be done about the inequality of appraisals and assessments, which is notorious in many Virginia counties.

In one major respect the commission appeared to lack the courage of its convictions. It recommended that localities be required to appraise property at 100 percent of true value, but it vitiated this sound proposal by suggesting that county officials be permitted to "determine at what fraction the values thus arrived at" will be recorded for tax purposes.

More Money for Schools

While emphasizing the individuality of the county, the commission did not entirely forget that the children of all the counties of the Commonwealth are Virginians. It committed itself, albeit in vague terms, to the principle that all Virginia children should have something like equal public school opportunities, regardles of what their county of residence might be. The commission recommended a "larger" equalization fund than the present one of $400,000.

The equalization fund is drawn upon to supplement the school appropriations of proper counties. Virginia has a long way to go, however, before anything like equality of public school opportunities is attained. At present some school divisions are spending eight times as much from local funds per child as other school divisions.

Mindful, no doubt of Governor-elect Battle's promise to use State funds for school construction—which is normally a responsibility of the localities—the Gray commission approved such a step "during the presently existing emergency, but only with the clear and definite understanding that a precedent is not established and that the localities must in the future, and under normal conditions, provide funds for such purposes from local revenues or other local sources."

The commission's other important recommendations included removing a confusing complication in budget calculations by the abolition of "special funds," and the allowance of State income tax exemptions to parallel those in the Federal law. It estimated the school building need at a "maximum of 220 million dollars, compared with the estimate of 396 million dollars submitted by division superintendents of schools.

The report is liberal and forward-looking in all major respects, except, perhaps in its insistence upon limiting taxation and expenditures. In the opinion of many, the commission, which found no necessity for new taxes "in the foreseeable future," failed to look Virginia's needs, especially the huge need for school and hospital construction, squarely in the face.

A very large number of observers—more than are willing to express themselves publicly—agree with the three dissenting members of the commission who felt that a sales tax will be unavoidable in the not far distant future.

The Tax Study Commission's report is likely to be heard from in Virginia for years to come. It will be referred to by opponents probably as much as by members of the dominant political organization. All but two or three members of the commission were organized adherents, but much of its report reads more like last year's campaign platform of Francis Pickens Miller than like the familiar conservatism of the Byrd machine.

Actually the report represents the conscientious effort of 21 able Virginians, with a minimum of concern for politics and a maximum of concern for the welfare of the Commonwealth.

Opponents in due course will cite the report as representing the limit to which the organization is willing to go in meeting the State's crying financial needs, but on its many other points they will probably watch for an opportunity to charge the organization with failure of accomplishment rather than attack the objectives which the commission has set up.

"Busiest Man" Made Red Cross Chairman

By Ellen Buell Parry

"IF YOU WANT a job done, ask a busy man to do it," was never more true than in the appointment of W. Alvord Sherman, jr., as the chairman of the 1950 Red Cross campaign for Fairfax County. Al is in the contracting business, is vice president of the Fairfax Standard Publishing Co., and president of School Emergency Association . . . to name a few of his many interests.

MR. SHERMAN

He has had wide experience in civic work. For 5 years he served on the Fairfax County School Board. He helped revise the county assessment. He has also worked for the Community Chest, both on the publicity and campaign committees this past year. He has been generous with his time in behalf of his nearest town, Vienna, of the county and the State.

In view of his already heavy schedule, we believe that only his great admiration for the work of the Red Cross, for Mrs. David Wing, the local chairman, and for Mrs. Edward Howrey, first vice chairman for Fairfax County, could have persuaded him to take on still another job. He said, on accepting, "Mrs. Wing and Jane Howrey have done, and do, so much civic work themselves, they are in a preferred position to ask others to work."

Al's family has owned beautiful Ash Grove, on the Leesburg Pike, just above Tyson's Corners, since 1850 when Al's grandfather bought it from the widow of Lord Henry Fairfax. Lord Henry was the nephew of Lord Thomas Fairfax, for whom Fairfax County was named. Lord Henry built the present house at Ash Grove in 1790, where he lived until his death. Al's mother lives there now, and Al and his wife, Nellie, and son, Wilson, (daughter Helene is married) live in another house on the grounds.

THE Georgetown Assembly is going modern. For the first time in its long history, the oldest dancing group in Washington is condoning public mention of its dances. For a generation the society has maintained a discreet and dignified silence about the gay whirl its members and their guests take three times a year. But this year is different. Reporters and columnists were invited to tell about the dance held December 30 at Linthicum Hall.

Although most of the 60 members live in Georgetown or elsewhere in the District, a few come down from Maryland or over from Virginia. There are eight from Fairfax County: A. Smith Bowman, jr., Charles Hamel, Henry Mackall, John Mackall, William H. Marbury, James Mason, Charles Pickett and Richard Shands.

The society dates back to before the Civil War. The dances were suspended during that conflict between North and South, but in 1896 they got into full swing again and have been held regularly ever since. At the last dance, the floor was newly sanded and waxed, the hall beautifully and tastefully decorated, and Dave McWilliams' orchestra made dancing not only easy, but irresistible.

The rules provide that a member may bring to each dance his wife or sweetheart, a couple and a stag, as well as extra guests, if advance permission is obtained. Before the dances, there are many dinner parties; after midnight a supper is served at the assembly.

J. Edward Burroughs, jr., is president of the society; John Mackall is secretary and treasurer.

EVERYONE in the Great Falls-Lewinsville-McLean-Langley area is using the new Whitehurst Freeway—that is, all except Charles Hamel. The Freeway was built to solve the problem of the bottleneck on M st., between 26th and 35th. Charlie Hamel immediately decided that, since everyone was on the Freeway, he and his Ford would find the going easier on M st. He says he is now the only one riding along M.

The ability to figure a different way of doing a thing—not just following the crowd—is probably what has made Charlie the successful senior partner of a large tax law firm.

Charlie and Ethel Hamel, and 12-year-old Charles, moved from Washington to beautiful Meadowbrook, at Lewinsville, eight years ago. Around the office, Charlie evidently spoke highly of the joys of country life, because five of his partners have moved to Fairfax County, too. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Park are at Falls Church, Mr. and Mrs. F. Weaver Myers and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Worthy live near Chain Bridge, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fredericks and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rothenburg have bought a place at Vienna.

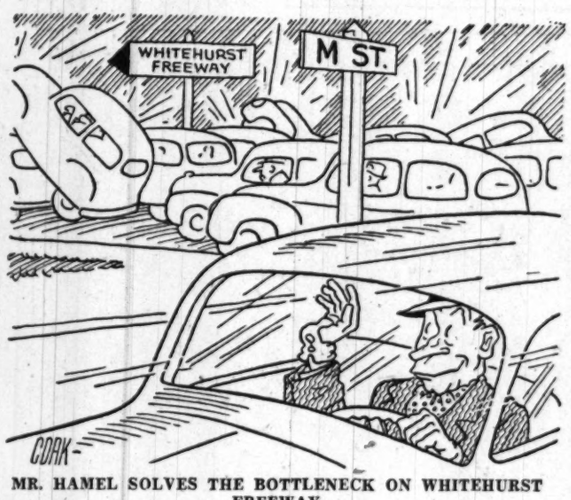

ALL work and no play . . .

The old adage doesn't fit Mrs. Douglas Hatch, of Millstone Farm, at Burke.

As if a town house, a country place, a lawyer husband, three children, and newspaper work, including an assignment which has just sent her flying around the world were not enough to keep her busy, she still has time for games. In fact, Ruth Hatch has invented a game. It's called Lobby.

Milton Bradley, the game manufacturer, has just put it on the market. "Lobby" is so authentic in its portrayal of what goes on around Congress that Detroit schools are already using it to teach the kids the inside story of Washington. Playing "Lobby," they learn all about filibustering, log-rolling, how bills are passed, and the who's who's in Congress by means of an authentic Congressional Register.

"Lobby" is popular with everybody except husband Douglas. At the moment, he's not playing it. It is rumored that he's too busy getting ready for a possible appearance before the Buchanan Committee investigating lobbies and lobbying.

Congress and Its Wives Flock to Club Reception

By Elizabeth Maguire

FIRST open house of the Second Session was held yesterday at the Congressional Club between 4 and 6 p.m. It was a good turn-out, predominantly feminine, as many of the Senators and Representatives worked through Sunday.

A committee of seven including Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Elbert Thomas, Mrs. Jay LeFevre, Mrs. Sid Simpson, Mrs. John J. Williams, Mrs. Clinton Anderson and Mrs. Harold H. Burton took turns greeting guests at the front door.

The first floor, where wraps were laid, has been redecorated since last spring. There is a library in dark green and Chinese red, and the walls of the Hawaiian Room have been painted lime yellow. Broad white marble stairs covered with red carpeting lead up to the white paneled ballroom, where Viennese waltzes were played yesterday by a red-coated Marine Band orchestra.

Punch and tea were served in adjoining rooms, and guests were received by Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, Senator and Mrs. Sheridan Downey, Representative and Mrs. Brooks Hays, Senator and Mrs. Olin Johnston, Representative and Mrs. Carl Curtis, Mrs. John D Lodge, Representative and Mrs. Paul J. Kilday, and Representative and Mrs. Lawrence H. Smith.

Gen. Romulo Attends Party

SENATOR AND MRS JOHN J. SPARKMAN of Alabama were there with their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Tazewell Shepard. Mrs. Charles Dewey and Mrs. Carroll D. Kearns spoke of the All-States Bazaar which will be held at the Congressional Club in March, and Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, president of U. N., and Mrs. Romulo had a chat with Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, wife of the former U. S. Ambassador to the Philippines.

Among the several hundred guests were Representative Frank A. Barrett, ranking member of the Public Lands Committee, and Mrs. Barrett; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brown, Mrs. Clifford Davis, wife of the Representative of Tennessee and former president of the club; Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Representative Daniel A. Reed, minority chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and Representative John Taber, minority chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

MR. and Mrs. Rene Blum of Woodhaven, Md., gave a cocktail party Saturday afternoon. Their guests included Camille Gutt, chairman of the International Monetary Fund, Ernest de Selliers, Pierre Jaspar, Belgian Counselor, and Col. Arthur G. Syran.

WILLIAM H. HUDGINS is entertaining at dinner tonight for popular Miss Drucie Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, and her fiance, Maj. John E. Horton, USA. The party will be held in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

Slim Outline, Short Hemline Slated for '50

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Milady will be slimmer than ever this spring—or at least, her clothes will make her look that way.

That's the advance prediction from designers in the top bracket of U. S. style, on the morning of the unveiling of their new creations. Fashion editors from all over the Nation were on hand to witness the week-long display, known officially as the Fourteenth National Press Week of the New York Dress Institute.

Other advance hints indicated that hemlines will rise about an inch shorter than last year, and that necklines will continue to swoop, often with elaborate trimmings to accentuate them.

Represented during the showings will be such "name' designers as Christian Dior, Pauline Trigere, Hattie Carnegie, Jacques Fath (who designs for Joseph Halpert), Ben Reig, Herbert Sondheim, Jane Derby, Adele Simpson, Hansen Bang, Philip Mangone and many more.

Scores of showings of accessory fashions are also scheduled for the week. On display in various showrooms throughout the city will be the new designs in hats, shoes, handbags, stockings, jewelry, lingerie, scarfs, fabrics and gloves. In addition, there will be news of the latest beauty trends, with accent on make-up colors and hair styles for spring and summer.

Where to Sell Old Phonograph Records

Do you know where I could sell some phonograph records by the late Caruso and several other famous tenors. All are in very good condition. B. S.

You might be able to sell the records through a record collector's exchange. There is one located in New York City. The complete address is Record Collector's Exchange, 56th st. at Fifth ave., New York, N. Y.

Please tell me how to clean the bits of burned grease from glass baking ware and from aluminum cookie sheets. Nothing I have been able to find will keep them shining clean, not even steel wool. Is there a product which will soften the burned particles so that they can be washed off? E. B. H.

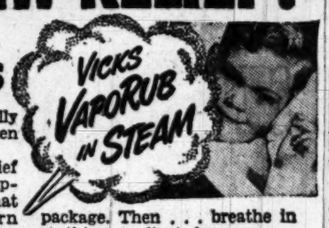

There is a product for removing burned-on grease from ovens and stoves which you can use and can be purchased most places where housewares are sold. Use according to directions which come with the product.

Another way to soften burned-on grease is to saturate a paper towel with ammonia and lay it over the surface. Leave several hours or overnight. This should soften it enough that rubbing with steel wool will completely remove it.

If you will wash the baking dishes thoroughly in soap and water after each use, rubbing discolored areas with steel wool, you should have no trouble in keeping them shining. It is repeated bakings of the stains which make them so difficult to remove.

'This I Remember'

Warm Springs in 1924: 'My Husband Loved It at Once'

This is the second installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

IT WAS in the autumn of 1924 that my husband went to Warm Springs for the first time. It was then a very rundown Southern summer resort which had seen much better days. The old hotel with its piazzas called to mind the Southern belles of Civil War days.

Franklin loved the place at once and described it enthusiastically in letters to his mother.

My lasting impression is of the kindness of all our neighbors. Hardly a day passed that something was not brought to our door—wood for the fireplace, or a chicken, or flowers.

My grandmother, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, whom I never knew, came from Georgia. Her sister, Mrs. James King Gracie, was very kind to us when we were children. She told us endless stories of plantation life in the South as she had lived it, and through her B'rer Rabbitt became a familiar and beloved character. She made me feel that life in the South must be gracious and easy and charming. I had never lived there, however, until we went to Warm Springs.

It was a disappointment for me to find that for many, many people life in the South was hard and poor and ugly, just as it is in parts of the North. Even though I recognized how greatly many people benefited from the place, I never really enjoyed living in Warm Springs as much as my husband did. I was grateful that my husband got so much joy and satisfaction out of it, but I never liked keeping house there.

For a number of years my husband went there in the autumn, and I remember the Thanksgiving Day celebrations with a mixture of joy and sadness. There seemed so much happiness in the children's faces, but the complete gallantry of all the people taking part always brought a choke to my throat. Some of the patients were on stretchers, some in wheelchairs, some on crutches. Some hoped to get well, many faced permanent handicaps, but all were cheerful for this evening at least!

In the early days of Warm Springs, Miss LeHand ("Missy" was Franklin's secretary from the 1920 campaign) spent a good deal more time there than I could. I still had four children—Anna, Elliott, Franklin, jr., and John—home in our house in New York City during the school year or at Hyde Park with my mother-in-law. Also I was carrying on a certain amount of political activity. This political work, of course, was done largely at the instigation of Louis Howe, who was also my husband's secretary and assistant. He was gnome-like and frail always, but an indefatigable worker. As a newspaperman in Albany he had first noticed my husband in the Legislature and had made up his mind that there was a young man with a future; from then on he watched him closely.

Gave Up Job

IN 1913 Louis went with Franklin to the Navy Department as his secretary. The connection would probably have been severed at the end of that period, because Louis had been offered a job which he had accepted before he heard of Franklin's illness. However, the moment he learned how seriously ill Franklin was, he came to Campobello and asked to be allowed to act as secretary. They were never again separated until Louis died.

During these years before Franklin went back into politics, a number of things I did were undertaken at Louis Howe's suggestion in order to interest Franklin. I was pushed into the women's division of the Democratic State Committee, not because Louis cared so much about my activities, but because he felt that they would make it possible for me to bring into the house people who would keep Franklin interested in State politics.

In the State campaigns we all worked hard. The organizing was primarily my job, and again with Louis Howe's help I thought up, I think, some of the best stunts that were undertaken: For instance, in the campaign of 1924 Alfred E. Smith was running against my cousin. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., just after the latter had been Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the Harding Administration. The Teapot Dome scandal—with which Theodore Roosevelt, jr., had had nothing to do—had created much excitement, so we had a frame resembling a teapot which spouted steam built over a car. It led the procession of cars which toured the State, following the Republican candidate for Governor wherever he went!

In the thick of political fights one always feels that all methods of campaigning which are honest are fair, but I do think now that this was a rough stunt, and I never blamed my cousin when he retaliated in later campaigns against my husband.

Louis also insisted that I learn to make speeches. He even went and sat in the back row when I was speaking and told me of my mistakes afterwards.

It was during these years too that I became engaged in two enterprises with Nancy Cook and Marion Dickerman, whom I had met in my political work. Franklin was particularly interested in one of our undertakings. He helped to design and build a stone cottage beside a brook where we often went to picnic during the first years after he was paralyzed. The brook was called Val-Kill, so we call the cottage Val-Kill Cottage.

Means to an End

THE COTTAGE was not an end in itself. It was only the place where Nancy Cook and Marion Dickerman lived and from which Miss Cook directed a furniture factory.

My husband had very little interest in the production of furniture, but he was greatly interested in finding some industry that could be developed in country areas such as ours and that could perhaps furnish occupation for some of the younger men who would otherwise leave the farms. By giving them work in an industry which would yield them a fairly good income through the slack period on the farm, he thought one could keep the progressive, more active young people working steadily and raise the standard of farm development in our area . . . Franklin's interest, therefore, in this new enterprise was in the training and the employment of young men in the vicinity.

We kept the factory going all through the early depression years, when the employment of people seemed vitally important. At last Miss Cook found that carrying two jobs—she was also executive secretary of the women's division of the Democratic State Committee—was too much for her and we closed the shop.

My husband's object was not achieved and I think it has been proved impractical on a much larger scale in some of the homesteads which were started during the depression. Some have succeeded, but few returned much of the original investment. Nevertheless, in the crisis they took people off relief and gave them back self-respect and a sense of security, which was a considerable achievement.

This experiment was a disappointment to Franklin, but he accepted it philosophically, both in our own case and in the case of the country-wide experiment. I think he felt regret. But with the same acceptance of the inevitable which he showed in so many other matters, having tried the experiment and become satisfied that it did not work, he gave it up and sought other solutions. He hoped that some day in the future it might work out, but he accepted things as they were and set these experiences aside as something to remember and perhaps use in the future.

I never made any money out of this furniture-making venture. In fact I think I was probably one of the best customers that the shop had. I bought various pieces of furniture as wedding presents and gifts for other occasions.

An Odd House

NANCY COOK and Marion Dickerman lived in the stone cottage until they moved to Connecticut in 1947. During the depression I took over the factory building and was able, through my earnings, to turn it into a fairly comfortable if somewhat odd house. Though I did not have any architectural advice, I did have the help of a friend, Henry Osthagen, who is an engineer. We used local labor entirely. Employing people seemed the best way to spend some of the money I could earn during those years.

Part of the shop we made into an apartment for my secretary, Malvina ("Tommy") Thompson, where I frequently went to work quietly with her. The rest of the building became a guest cottage, which we used when the big house was overcrowded—something that frequently happened during the years when my husband was the President. Since turning the old Hyde Park house over to the Government, I have made the converted shopbuilding my year-round home, though I keep an office in a small apartment in New York City.

During the early years of my acquaintance with Nancy Cook and Marion Dickerman, I became associated in the Todhunter School with Miss Dickerman, who was first the assistant principal and then the principal of the school.

I began teaching at the school in 1927. I taught only the older girls, because I considered that it took less training to teach them than to teach the younger children. I taught courses in American history and in English and American literature, and later we tried some courses in current events which I hope were more practical than are many of the courses given to 16 and 17 year old girls. We visited the New York City courts, and I think many young people learned a great deal from sitting in one of the children's courts for an hour. Those whose parents allowed them to go, I took to see the various kinds of tenements that exist in a city like New York. We visited the big markets and various places which made the government of the city something real and alive and not just so many words in a textbook.

In spite of my political activities, and running the mansion in Albany after my husband was elected Governor, I continued to teach two and a half days a week. I left Albany on Sunday evenings and returned Wednesday afternoons each week. It was rather strenuous while we were in Albany but, of course, fairly easy when we were living at Hyde Park, as we were for longer periods when the Legislature was not in session. Later, when we went to Washington, I conducted a class for graduates and their friends, first on a weekly and then on a monthly basis for a while.

In the spring of 1928, when it looked as though Governor Smith would be the candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket, Mrs. Belle Moskowitz asked me to organize the women's end of the office for the national campaign.

Smith's Principles

THAT June my husband went with our son Elliott to the Democratic National Convention, which met in Houston, Tex.

Because of his social program, Franklin and I had long supported Governor Smith politically. We believed that he had at heart the welfare of the average man and woman.

Because he had spent the greater part of his life in one State and practically in one city, Governor Smith had certain shortcomings; still, we felt that he understood the needs of the people and that he had a genius for government. We never doubted his integrity.

Franklin did not feel he could do much work in the campaign, but he came into the office occasionally and headed the businessmen's division. Also, he sat in on planning meetings and made some speeches. Louis Howe he assigned to represent him at the headquarters full time, working with Governor Smith, Mr. John Raskob, Mr. Edward J. Flynn and others.

In the early autumn of that year Franklin spent considerable time at Warm Springs, but he was glad to have me continue to help in the campaign.

. . . It was not until I began to see the full alignment against us that I became very doubtful of success. Governor Smith was Roman Catholic, and the kind of propaganda that some of the religious groups—aided and abetted by the opposition—put forth in that campaign gave me a sense of utter disgust with religious bias. I think by nature I am a fairly liberal person without intense prejudice, but if I needed anything to show me what prejudice can do to the intelligence of human beings, that campaign was the best lesson I could have had.

In September of that year I motored to Groton to put our youngest son, John, in boarding school. I had by then come to feel that once a child went to boarding school there never again could be the strong ties with, and dependence on, the family which existed up to that time.

I had never been a convinced boarding school advocate for the 12-year-old. But, my husband, who had not gone to boarding school until he was 14, always felt that the loss of those two years had been a hardship, because the other boys had already formed their friendships and he remained always a little the outsider. Our boys all went at the age of 12 or soon thereafter. I still believe it is too young and a loss to both parents and children. The day I took each boy to school, unpacked his clothes and settled him was always a terrible day for me.

When it came to John, it was particularly hard. I think I resented taking our youngest son more than the others, because there was no child now left at home. My daughter Anna had been married to Curtis Dall, so she was already occupied with her own affairs. It was fortunate, I think, that I had a strenuous autumn to cope with after John left. I might otherwise have been a very disagreeable companion for my husband and mother-in-law.

Even though I was teaching school and working at national campaign headquarters in New York City, I attended the New York State Democratic convention that fall. I mention this here to tell the story as I remember it—the story of how my husband was finally persuaded to run for Governor.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

Student Jimmie

Our Jimmie dear is doing well . . . In all his work at school . . . And he is happily inclined . . . To head the golden rule . . . He writes a neat, attractive hand . . . Keeps up with all the news . . . And every day he spruces up . . . And polishes his shoes . . . Of course he wants allowances . . . For dances and for shows . . . And many are the other ways . . . In which the money goes . . . And we must furnish cookies and . . . A special cake or two . . . To help his happiness along . . . And see his struggles through . . . But we are mighty proud of him . . . And we are sure that he . . . Will be a credit to himself . . . And to our family.

THE DISTRICT LINE

These Days, A Simple Sales Message Won't Do

My item about door-to-door salesmen brings a varied response.

Mrs. Clara Davidson of 6001 Henning st., Bethesda, Md., suggests that sales organizations would get a better reception, and do more and sounder business, if they'd concentrate on a good product and an honest sales message.

Several other District Liners share that sentiment, and report unsatisfactory encounters with salespeople who got a foot in the door through misrepresentation of one kind or another.

However a strong protest has been lodged by a reader who makes a living selling magazines. He says:

"This is the age of gimmicks. To sell anything—magazines, suits or dishes—you've got to have an effective way to get attention. Radio sponsors spend millions to get your attention, pretty models in bathing suits adorn newspaper and magazine ads for the same purpose, and everybody with a product to sell must use a variation of this basic technique to get an audience for his sales message. But so long as one doesn't misrepresent either the product or its price, there is no law violation involved."

He goes on to say that if a woman tries on a hat and the salesgirl says "Oh, it's stunning" when she knows it isn't, that may also be called misrepresentation. But it's part of the game of selling and buying. The buyer expects a certain amount of "salestalk," and is supposed to make allowance for it.

To a certain extent, he makes a good point. We have developed a rather curious affection for some types of misrepresentation and for clever attention-getters—as witness the growth of the publicity agent's importance in the business field.

But I think we've got to draw a line between attention-getters and outright misrepresentation. The audience at a medicine show (these days it's a radio program) knows that after the entertainment comes the commercial. But they like the system, and aren't misled by it.

MISCELLANY

"Air Conditioned Cocktails" reads the sign on an H st. cafe, according to Tom M. Parks of 504 I st. nw . . . They're probably the kind with no alcohol, that leave you "cold" sober . . . Ormond L. Cox of 107 Grafton st., Chevy Chase, Md., says that (if you agree that centuries start in the '01 year, not in '00) then it may be stated with finality that no century will ever begin on a Sunday, Wednesday or Friday . . . And I'd certainly like to stick around long enough to check that theory a few times . . . E. L. Springer of 2957 Upton st. nw. agrees with me that waiting in the rain for a bus isn't very pleasant. But he adds that even worse is being passed up by the jam-packed bus that finally does arrive . . . Mrs. H. F. Custer of Culpeper, Va., suggests that anybody who would accept 49 cents in payment of a half-dollar debt can consider the end of 1949 as the close of a half-century . . . W. M. Devine of 234 F st. nw., who agrees with that viewpoint, adds: "I went all through this argument in January of 1900, so it has a familiar ring" . . . There's a man who is as old as I feel . . . Marvin A. Marx of 3824 2d st. se. has high praise for the Premier cab driver who played Good Samaritan when Marv ran out of gas the other middle-of-the-night . . . Capital Transit scores twice. Ralph W. Moore of 610 G st. se. commends Operator 1283 for helping a blind man, and company records identify the courteous employe as A. G. Thompson of 1009 Merrimack dr., Silver Spring, Md., who is better than a green hand with Capital Transit. He joined the firm some 28 years ago . . . R. M. Cole of 1448 Park rd. nw. likes the pleasant, friendly greeting that passengers get from Operator 2562, who turns out to be Chester L. Queener of 110 C st. ne., a relative newcomer to the service . . . William A. Tinsley of 1305 17th st. nw. gets rather philosophical when you mention streetcar companies and wonders whether they belong in an age with collar buttons, livery stables and muzzle-loading shotguns—or whether transit companies are still as sound as ever and it's the private motorist who is out of step with these crowded modern times. Buses and streetcars can haul scores of passengers in the space occupied by a couple of autos carrying one or two people each. Apparently the question is: How long will we be able to afford the luxury of a bit of elbow room for every citizen?

PERSONAL NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Anagnos, 5 Burgess dr., Chillum Gardens, Md.: Thank you; I'll do my best.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING

Cody Pfanstiehl of WTOP is a man who seems to encounter double numbers at every turn.

His auto license number is 1313. His phone number is 2868. His membership card in the National Speleological Society is 1160. His street address is 2222. His membership card in AVC is 5441. Even his public library card contains a double number—1505.

So Cody just smiled philosophically when his missus went off to see the baby doctor and returned with the X-ray picture verdict. She's going to have twins.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—William Saroyan is about to negotiate a unique deal with producer Irving Jacobs—a partnership arrangement for the production of several of his plays. Saroyan's business methods are startling. When L. B. Mayer offered him $60,000 for "The Human Comedy," the writer drew a coin and offered to flip it "double or nothing." They finally compromised, and Saroyan then demanded and received a suite of offices, a baby-grand pianola flown from N. Y., a dart-board and an office boy to pick up the darts and bring them back to Saroyan . . . "My movie-making technique," Saroyan told Mayer, "is 'Don't Make an Epic Out of Everything'." The movie won the Academy Award, and the Oscar was mailed to him. It followed him all over Europe. "My uncle got it," said Saroyan. "He thinks it's for him."

Russell Crouse was discussing the many excuses offered by box-office men for lack of business. Crouse once asked his box-office man why the theater was half empty. "It rained at 7:30 p. m.," he explained, "ruined the window trade." Other excuses were: "The President is broadcasting tonight, and they're staying home to listen," or "the heavyweight championship fight tonight," or "Holy Week" . . . One night Crouse went to the theater. It hadn't rained, there was no championship fight, no income-tax day, no competing conditions. "I know," Crouse told him. "There's a big dance in Newark tonight."

Joe Frisco, the veteran vaudeville comic, has been working sporadically in West Coast cafes. He supplements his income by borrowing from New York friends he meets. Now he has devised a new approach for these loans: Whenever he meets an old friend Frisco asks: "Do you need any money?" And when the surprised listener assures him: "No. I'm doing well, thank you," Frisco makes the kill: "Since you're doing well, lend me a sawbuck."

High Speed Commercial Travel Seen

By Drew Pearson

Their findings won't be published for some time, but United States air experts have done some amazing research on the airplane of the future. As a result, they are definitely of the opinion that commercial airlines someday will fly at the speed of sound.

PEARSON

However, it will probably be too expensive to fly commercial planes faster than sound, because of the high cost of refrigeration, air-conditioning and structural strength that must be built into planes traveling at supersonic speeds. The danger of air crashes will also be reduced to a minimum, the scientists say, by automatic aircraft control and radar-block traffic control.

Military planes, on the other hand, will fly at unlimited speeds, powered by turbine-type engines using atomic energy as fuel, according to the experts. The fighters and bombers of the future will be controlled from the ground, and the pilot will go along just in case something goes wrong. They will fly at an altitude between 80,000 and 100,000 feet.

And all this will happen, the scientists claim, within the lifetime of many of us. Furthermore at the risk of being ridiculed, they predict that, sometime during the next 50 years, rockets will be able to travel from the earth to Mars.

Biggest problem in interplanet rocket travel is developing a fuel light enough to pack in a small space, yet powerful enough to break away from the pull of the earth's gravity. This will take an "escape speed" of 23,000 miles per hour.

To leave the earth, an atomic-powered rocket would shoot to the earth's outer atmosphere and circle the earth at a "satellite speed" of 18,000 miles per hour. Then an extra burst of 5000 miles per hour would be necessary to take off into space.

Congressmen on Spot

Congressman Usher Burdick, a big, shaggy bear of a man, has House leaders on the spot and crying for mercy.

Burdick, a North Dakota rancher and ex-football great, wears a battered cowpoke's hat and is as independent as they come. Nominally he is a Republican, but he votes them as he sees them. Leaders on both sides of the aisle, however, would like him to forget his resolution for an investigation of congressional payrolls.

In the cloakroom arguments, Burdick says bluffly, "Out my way, the folks kept asking, 'What about them crooks in Congress? Is Drew Pearson the only one in Washington worrying about them?' We'd better clean our house proper, if people are going to have any respect for Congress. We should be the first ones to put a stop, voluntarily, to kickbacks and payroll padding."

Only in a Democracy

President Truman gave House Republican Leader Joe Martin of Massachusetts a hearty handclasp before entering the House chamber to deliver his "State of the Union" message.

"You're looking mighty good, Joe," beamed Truman. "How do you do it?"

"Oh, that's because we Republicans don't have many responsibilities," replied Martin.

The President was somewhat upset by GOP heckling during his references to the Republican Eightieth Congress. And when he retired to Speaker Rayburn's office following the speech, John McCormack of Massachusetts perked him up.

"Just remember," he said, "that could happen only in a Democratic country."

Merry-Go-Round

Clark Clifford the President's ablest brain truster tells friends he may not be gone from Government long. . . . Tennessee's Senator Kenneth McKellar the sometimes absentminded grandpa of the Senate, showed up for the opening session 40 minutes early. Though he was the sole occupant of the chamber, he marched grandly down the aisle, took his seat, shuffled through papers, scribbled notes, snapped his fingers for imaginary page boys. Puzzled tourists in the spectators' gallery couldn't decide whether he was just rehearsing or absently thought the session had already started. . . . Hard-boiled newsmen on Capitol Hill showed recently that they have hearts of gold underneath. They heard that A. P. Reporter Howard Dobson was desperately ill, that the Associated Press might reduce his salary because his sick leave had run out. So they scraped up $1760 as a Christmas present for the Dobson family. . . .
